POWER TO CALL GUARD GIVEN PRESIDENT AS CONGRESS SENDS BILL TO WHITE HOUSE

British Raid 'Big Berthas'; Civilians Flee Dover

RAF Bombers Pound Bases on French Coast

'Germans' Aim Poor,' Say Britons; Raiders Over England.

By The Associated Press.

British bombers pounded heavily last night and early today at German long-range guns which stud the French coast from Calais to Boulogne and which are causing civilians to flee from Dover—already dubbed "hell's corner" because of the frequency of its air battles.

Along with the flashing sight and booming sound of air war on the French coast, all German radio stations ceased operation last night, usually an indication that British raiders are penetrating Germany.

Bombers Return.

At the same time, low-diving German planes dropped bombs on many points in Britain, particularly in the southeast and southwest areas.

British attacks on the German vantage points apparently were a continuation of earlier blows which the air ministry announced were begun last night when the Nazis loosed their big guns against Dover.

In London, the air ministry announced that RAF planes braved fierce antiaircraft fire for several hours to blast at the newly disclosed German blockade weapon.

22 Airdromes Stormed.

The air force also stormed 22 airdromes in German-occupied territory, the air ministry reported.

Except for a bombing assault on three London suburbs, inflicting considerable property damage but few casualties, German air raids over England were limited to small-scale, scattered attacks for the fifth straight day. Two empty movie theaters, a bank, stores, apartment houses and other buildings were smashed by bomb-hits.

British military experts scoffed at Nazi assertions that the powerful "Big Berthas," apparently firing from camouflaged nests with a range of more than 20 miles, provide "a weapon to control the English channel." They insisted the German shells could give the Nazis no more than a "nuisance" advantage.

While British long-range cannons hurled shells across the channel into the vicinity of German-occupied Calais, by way of retort, Britons pointed out that a mile-long convoy of merchant ships—the slow target that drew the German shore batteries' fire—escaped without casualty.

The convoy's safe passage not only proved the ineffectiveness of Germany's big guns, a London spokesman said, but also exploded the Nazi claim of having established an air-tight blockade of the Island Kingdom.

Nevertheless, many of Dover's

Three Georgia Editors Given 50-Year Pins

Nine Awards of Merit Distributed at Meeting in Savannah.

By HERMAN HANCOCK, Staff Writer.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 23.—Nine awards of merit and 43 other honors were distributed to Georgia newspapers here tonight as members of the Georgia Press Association interrupted the 54th annual banquet to recognize publications excelling in various phases of newspaper work for the past year.

And three veteran editors—E. L. Turner, of the Valdosta Times; John N. Holder, of the Jackson Herald, in Jefferson, and James Kempton, of the Fulton County Daily Report, Atlanta—won the most coveted honor in the gift of Georgia editors, buttons signifying they have been publisher in the state continuously for 50 years.

Two hundred delegates and members of their families, attending the association convention, suspended festivities to pay tribute to those who have blazed a trail in the state's journalism and set an enviable record of splendid tradition and accomplishments.

Presented at Banquet.

The presentations came at the banquet at the DeSoto hotel, to which the convention moved during the afternoon at winding up the "first phase" of the 1940 convention at Macon, the Savannah News and Press were convention hosts, but delegates were saddened by the absence of William G. Sutlive, late editor of the News, who during his life was one of the most valuable and devoted members.

Following is the list of awards and honorable mentions made by the committee of judges, composed of two State Press Association manager-secretaries—Doyle L. Buckles, of Alabama; and Bruce McCoy, of Louisiana:

H. H. Dean, trophy for the best editorial published by any newspaper—to the Camilla Enterprise, published by B. T. Burson. The Camilla Enterprise editorial was selected primarily for the courageous stand taken by the publication. Second place was given to the Dalton News, and third place to the Georgia Guide, at Gibson, with honorable men-

Quick Passage Of Draft Bill Is Demanded

Roosevelt Says Postponement Would Mean Year's Delay.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—President Roosevelt demanded quick passage of conscription legislation today—lest, he said, the national defense program be seriously delayed—but his appeal had no discernible effect upon the senate's ardent band of anti-draft members.

To the latter, in fact, Mr. Roosevelt's statement constituted a challenge, promptly accepted. They rushed to defend their tactic of exhaustive debate. They asserted that no filibuster was in progress but that such a "revolutionary" proposal demanded thorough examination. One of them, Senator Wiley, Republican, Wisconsin, said that three more weeks' discussion would hardly be too much.

Year of Delay.

But, as the President saw the problem and outlined it to a press conference, postponement of conscription would mean nearly a year of delay in building up an adequate army. Volunteering has been at a high rate, he added, but is still insufficient. Conscription had been under discussion in congress since June 20, he said, and the legislators were still talking about it, with no action in either house.

Senator Wiley, Republican, Wisconsin, delivered a speech highly critical of the civilian draft bill, and Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota, denounced the measure as an "insult to our American boys," a "serious departure from the American way," and a proposal that might "help crack our democracy." The bill was proposed, he said, in "response to a hysteria that can definitely lead to dictatorship."

Need Manpower.

Mr. Roosevelt delivered his appeal slowly and earnestly. Defense preparations had concentrated this summer, he said, on orders for new equipment, much of which would be delivered this fall and early next spring. It had been said many times, he observed, that manpower without equipment would serve no good purpose, and now it was equally true that equipment without manpower would be of no use.

U. S. Cautions Japan Day of Reckoning Due

Blunt Warning Handed to Ambassador Detailing Troubles in China

By The United Press.

HONGKONG (Saturday)—Aug. 24.—The United States government has delivered a new and drastic warning to Japan that a time of reckoning must come if Japan persists in her present course in East Asia, reliable informants told the United Press today.

The warning was said to have been delivered personally to Japanese Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi in Washington, by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

Forwarded to Tokyo.

It was in the form of an "aide memoire" and was forwarded to Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka in Tokyo who has not replied to it and probably will not do so, the informants said.

Horinouchi was called to the State Department about a fortnight ago, according to the informants, and given a long review of the American viewpoint after which the written memorandum was handed to him for the information of his government.

The document reviewed in broad outline the history of Japanese-American relations since the beginning of the Chinese-Japanese conflict in July, 1937, the informants said, and stressed the viewpoint of the United States government with regard to the rights of Americans in China.

Matters Not Forgotten.

It went into detail with regard to hindrances to American trade and other American rights in China, and concluded with an assertion that these matters were not being forgotten and that a time certainly would come when a reckoning would be necessary.

The language of the warning, according to the informants, was extremely blunt and the most vigorous the State Department has used in all the series of communications it has sent to Tokyo during the past three years.

The informants said the document carried farther and brought up to date the warning contained in the address made by the American ambassador to Tokyo, Joseph C. Grew, on October 19, 1939, following his return to his post from Washington.

Harry L. Hopkins Will Resign Secretary of Commerce Post

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP)—It was learned tonight that Harry L. Hopkins will tender his resignation soon as secretary of commerce. President Roosevelt is expected to accept it reluctantly.

The President and Hopkins, friends for some 16 years, have been coworkers in New York and Washington for the last decade. The widower secretary of commerce makes his home at the White House, and Mrs. Roosevelt has been a second mother to his eight-year old daughter, Diane.

It has been known that Hopkins has felt for some time that his health prevented the application to his position that it deserved. He was sick for many months last year and, although there has been a steady improvement in his health recently, he remains far from rugged. Close friends have said that, while he can work six hours a day, he has felt that six hours is not a day's work and that in these days a cabinet officer should be prepared to go ahead at full speed for 12 hours, or more.

As relief administrator, Hopkins was the target of sometimes severe criticism, and a senate fight was made on his confirmation as secretary of commerce. However, he was confirmed by a vote of more than two to one.

The retiring secretary found government "exciting" and his own part in it a bit unbelievable. "I have to pinch myself," he once told a friend, "to be sure I am not dreaming. Think of it, a son of an Iowa harness maker in the cabinet." He said, too, that he entered the cabinet "on a shoe string" and would go out the same way.

The resignation of Hopkins will leave the two top places in the Department of Commerce vacant. Edward J. Noble, undersecretary, resigned recently and this place has not been filled.

GUARD LEADERS AT WORK—Well-oiled wheels of Georgia's National Guard were put in motion yesterday with the news that the guard training bill had been sent to the White House for the President's signature. More than 2,000 Georgians are in the 30th Division, one of the units to be called into service. Busy unwinding tape were Lieutenant Colonel Charles S. Vance, left, executive officer of the 214th Coast artillery, and Major Phil Brewster, assistant adjutant general of Georgia and battalion commander of the 214th. Georgia units may be among the first called.

State Cavalry May Be Made Antitank Unit

War Department Plan Includes Governor's Horse Guards.

The War Department is planning to convert the units of the 108th Cavalry, Georgia National Guard, including the Governor's Horse Guards in Atlanta, into an antitank battalion, Fourth Corps Area headquarters was notified yesterday. The change is contingent on the approval of Brigadier General John E. Stoddard, adjutant general of the state.

Contacted in Savannah yesterday afternoon, General Stoddard said that he had not yet been officially notified of the contemplated change, but saw no reason why it should not go through. "Obviously I will do what the War Department desires but prefer to withhold any other statements until I have had time to give careful study of the War Department's plans upon my return to Atlanta Saturday," he said.

The Governor's Horse Guards, which is part of the 108th Cavalry, is Atlanta's most colorful military unit.

The regiment has several units in Georgia. Regimental headquarters are in Hinesville, under command of Colonel Joseph B. Fraser. First Squadron headquarters and the Horse Guards, a machinegun company, are located in Atlanta; Troop B, in Hinesville; a medical detachmenf and Troop A in Savannah.

Other units of the regiment are stationed in Louisiana, and as far as could be learned last night, will not be affected by the change.

Commander of the First Squadron is Major Theodore Goulsby; of the Horse Guards, Captain Wesley U. Moran; of Troop A, Captain Lester Henderson; and of Troop B, Captain Paul E. Caswell. The medical detachment is headed by Captains George L. Touchton and Herbert G. Bailey.

2,000 Guardsmen in Georgia Face Mobilization Under Bill

Units of 30th Division in State Expected To Be Among First Summoned After President Signs Measure.

More than 2,000 Georgia National Guardsmen attached to the 30th Division face mobilization under legislation sent to President Roosevelt yesterday giving him authority to call the National Guard into service for any 12-month period.

Guard officials here explained that the next move is up to the President. They pointed out that after he signs the bill the next step will be to set the day for mobilization, as the War Department has already designated the units for the first call.

The Georgia units of the 30th Division are expected to be among the first summoned into training. Guardsmen of the two Carolinas and Tennessee are included in the 30th Division.

Tentative Plans.

According to tentative plans, the guardsmen will train at Camp Jackson, near Columbia, S. C.

Major General Henry D. Russell, of Macon, is commander of the 30th Division.

Other key officers from Georgia are:

Colonel Benjamin T. Watkins, chief of staff, Macon.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles E. Thompson, adjutant general, Atlanta.

Major Roy LeCraw, Atlanta, commander of special troops.

Colonel Lewis C. Pope, commander, 121st Infantry, Dublin.

Colonel Sheftall B. Coleman, commander 118th Field Artillery, Savannah.

Captain L. O. Moseley, aide de camp to General Russell.

Guard headquarters here yesterday said no orders or information had been received officially regarding the mobilization bill. Adjutant General John Stoddard was out of the city.

Individual Georgia units which would be affected by a mobilization order follow:

Italians Regain What's Left of Fort in Libya

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Italian troops have reoccupied Fort Capuzzo near Bardia in Libya following the British navy's recent shelling of the stone fort, British military headquarters announced here tonight.

"The enemy reoccupied what is left of Fort Capuzzo after the naval bombardment of August 17," the communique said.

Measure Sent To Roosevelt For Signature

60,000 Officers and Men Expect Early Call To Duty.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—President Roosevelt received congressional authority today to mobilize the National Guard, and in military circles it was anticipated that he would soon order active duty for about 60,000 officers and men.

Senate approval of a compromise bill, already passed by the house, sent the guard legislation to the White House. No dissent was heard in the voice vote.

The measure permits Mr. Roosevelt to order 12 months' active service for approximately 396,000 guardsmen, reserve officers and enlisted reserves.

175,000 in South.

Forces numbering nearly 175,000 men will be stationed in the south under the plan of army expansion. They will be regulars and National Guardsmen.

Excepting established cantonments where proper facilities exist, the troops will be established in tent camps. Full construction programs to make the camps habitable await further action of congress.

Georgia's Fort Benning, a cantonment, will serve its new armored division of 16,000 men without resort to tents.

However, about 21,000 troops will be housed in tents at Camp Jackson, S. C., consisting of a "square division," antitank battalion, field artillery regiment and miscellaneous units.

12,000 at Bragg.

Fort Bragg, N. C., a cantonment, will have the Ninth Division and a recruit reception center, totaling 12,000 men.

Tents at Camp Blanding, Fla., will hold about 40,000 personnel, consisting of two "square divisions" and two field artillery regiments.

Camp Shelby, Miss., with tents, will accommodate two "square divisions" of 36,600 men and somewhat more than 5,000 others in miscellaneous units.

There will also be a tent camp at Camp Robinson, Ark., to take care of one "square division" and an infantry regiments, totaling about 21,000 men.

These men would receive intensive training and be available to replace on continental duty any regular army troops dispatched to Latin America, or elsewhere, because of an emergency.

While an early call to this group was expected, it was believed that the date for them to report would not be earlier than the middle of September.

The National Guard is now undergoing field training, to be completed August 31. Army officials indicated that at least two weeks

Bombs Thin Milk, Cow Owner Freed

LONDON, Aug. 23. — (AP) — Farmer Charles James, of Barry, Wales, who argued that his cows gave thin milk because German bombs scared them, was acquitted today of selling milk deficient in butterfat.

When James was arrested last week he pleaded that he wasn't responsible for the milk. A commission was appointed to check up on his claims.

Consul Is Silent On Nazi Doings In Latin Nations

Henry Confers With Leaders Here on South American Market.

Diplomatically reserved on Fifth Columning and other German activities in Latin America, Robert Horton Henry, United States consul at Buenos Aires, arrived in Atlanta yesterday for a series of trade conferences with southern businessmen interested in the growing South American market.

Still an American after more than 10 years in the diplomatic service, he was glad to talk of Argentina's preference for light Georgia tobacco over dark Brazilian; of the fine market in that relatively treeless nation for Georgia hardwoods; of the virtual monopoly our chemical industry has enjoyed since European imports were cut off, and of North America's chances for retaining the South American trade when the nations of Europe are again at peace.

But he stoutly declined comment on how far the ideological ideas of Nazi Germany have gone toward capturing the Latin imagination and mind. Washington's trade ideas have gone a long way toward capturing Latin commerce, and his visit here is strictly in the interests of its further expansion, he said.

Give and Take.

Trade, like a lot of other things, is a matter of give and take, the foreign officer declared. Therefore, the more the United States buys from Argentina the more dollars Argentina will have to buy what she needs from us, and vice versa.

Since the war, the United States exports to the Argentine have shown a marked increase. The inability of Britain and other European countries to supply basic iron and steel machinery and chemicals has made it necessary for Argentina to turn to the north as a source of supply.

In exchange, Argentina ships us flaxseed, wool, hides, canned meat and quebracho, an acid used in tanning leather. Unfortunately for the mutual trade of the two nations, both produce surplus quantities of meat and grains.

Will Pay Premium.

While Henry doesn't believe that the United States will be able to retain the trade gains made in these abnormal times, he thinks that the superior quality of most American products, particularly American specialties, is generally recognized in the Argentine and many importers will always be willing to pay a reasonable premium for the high quality that characterizes American standards.

The guest of C. Parker Persons, district manager of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, while in the city, Henry spoke yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the Atlanta Foreign Trade and Travel Club.

At the luncheon, members passed resolutions of regret on the death last May of W. H. Schroder, who was Persons' predecessor as bureau manager.

F.D.R., Cabinet Hold Secretive 2-Hour Parley

Controversial Destroyer Issue Is Believed Discussed at Session.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(UP) President Roosevelt and his cabinet held what apparently was a momentous two-hour session today but the conferees refused to confirm that they canvassed proposed transfer of United States destroyers to Great Britain.

It was widely believed, nevertheless, that they discussed the controversial destroyer issue at length, as well as projected leasing of British possessions in this hemisphere for use as naval and air bases.

The cabinet members emerged tight-lipped.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt summoned American members of the United States-Canadian joint defense board to meet with him tomorrow morning.

Draft Bill Amendment Would Deport Bridges

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP) Senator Reynolds, Democrat, North Carolina, offered today as an amendment to the conscription bill legislation to deport Harry Bridges, west coast labor leader.

The house has passed the legislation but the senate immigration committee substituted a measure directing the attorney general to investigate Bridges to determine whether his deportation was justified. Reynolds called Bridges "Enemy No. 1" of "the enemies within."

LOSS TO FARMERS.

CARROLLTON, Ga., Aug. 23.—Carroll county farmers will lose between $60,000 and $70,000 this year because Georgia does not have a pure seed law, John F. Mauldin, county agent, declares. Local farmers, he said, purchased large quantities of hay seed which have failed to produce.

Ideal German Hideouts Seen In Caribbean

How Nazis Are Building Network for Armed Raiders Revealed.

(Editor's note: How the Nazis are perfecting a refueling network in the western Caribbean to serve their submarines and armed raiders is revealed here in a series of six articles, of which this is the third, by two adventurous sea-going reporters who have just returned to New York from a "snoop cruise" in those waters.

By LEICESTER HEMINGWAY and ANTHONY JENKINSON.

(Copyright, 1940, by The North American Newspaper Alliance. World Rights Reserved)

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Throughout the summer of 1938, just a year before the outbreak of war, a small German steamship threaded its way back and forth through the hundreds of reefs and tiny islands that make up the Miskito Keys, a group of Caribbean islets, about which less is known than any other comparatively available group on earth. We visited them recently on the "snoop cruise" of the schooner Blue Stream.

Aboard the German vessel were many strange instruments and much scientific equipment. At every port where she put in, onlookers were told that she was shark fishing with new secret apparatus and so could not welcome visitors.

The German mystery ship cruised the islands and banks of the Western Caribbean. It is significant that she did not catch any sharks, that she took more depth soundings than finny specimens. And that she spent considerable time in Miskito Keys.

Desolate Area.

No wilder, more desolate stretch of coastline exists in North America than the 200 miles surrounding the northeastern tip of Nicarauga.

Take out your Atlas and you may find the Miskito Keys, called "cays" by the natives, off the blunted tip of Cape Gracias. If it is a big Atlas you may also find the Ham Cays, Nasa Cays, Pigeon Cays, the Caratasca, Caxones, Becerro, Vivario, King, Man-of War and Pearl Cays. And then further out you may find the Serranilla, Serrana, Roncador, Quito Sueno, Albuquerque and Courtown Cays.

Altogether there are more than 200 widely spread, hard-to-find, supremely dangerous cays in the area 150 miles off the cape.

There are enough wrecked sailing ships and steamships piled up on them to provide perches for millions of seabirds, shelter for caches of fuel oil and supplies for the agents of any foreign power planning an attack on the American republics bordering on the Caribbean. Operators of Nazi fuel bases will either use the cays as hide-outs for raiders or auxiliary depots for fuel storage.

Potential Moorings.

Every one of these cays is a potential seaplane mooring, with smooth water, a lagoon or reef to windward for protection, and dry land to get out and stretch and where supplies can be stored without the knowledge of a living soul.

Until the Nazis came, the only human beings that ever went to these islands were occasional fishermen and turtlers on schooners from the British Cayman Islands, off the south coast of Cuba. Last winter the British schooner Alston vanished without a trace, with 18 persons aboard, while sailing from old Providence island, through the Miskito Cays to Grand Cayman. Other Cayman schooner captains don't like the idea of blundering on a Nazi base.

A few years ago the Nazis began moving into the area around the Cape. A few here and a few there. Some up the Patuca river, some in Brewers' Lagoon, some on the edges of the Great Caratasca Lagoon. There they raise bananas and cut mahogany, towing their produce around with powerful German Diesel tugs and barges. These same tugs require Diesel oil legitimately for their operation and could easily be used either to meet a Nazi raider for refueling at a given rendezvous in the Miskito or any other remote group of cays. Or they could haul fuel oil to any vessel waiting off the bar of any river on the north coast of Honduras.

Submarine Reported Seen.

It was off Great Swan Island, a hundred miles north of the mouth of the Patuca river, that a submarine of unknown nationality was reported last winter. The Swan Islands are United States territory, according to the State Department and the United Fruit Company, yet are only used as a weather station and no patrol vessels operate from them. They are barren sand and coral.

Aboard the "snoop cruise" schooner Blue Stream we noticed the absence of the Cayman schooners in the cays, and asked the radio operator at Puerto Cabezas, first settlement south of the Cape, about them.

"They're probably still worried about that German shark fishing boat," he said. Of German parentage, he spent his boyhood in Missouri. "The word got around among the fishermen that the Nazis were going to assemble prefabricated submarines on some isolated island around here, and now they're afraid to go off the beaten track. The British around here don't take any stock in rumors, though. They don't even mind listening to the DNB (official German news agency) news broadcasts on the war."

"What about the Germans around here?"

"There aren't many," he said, "but the ones there are make up for their small number. Usually about one to a town, without any visible means of support. Lehman, our general merchandise manager here, has charge of all the fuel oil and is the most important German here."

Further down the coast we were to learn more about Lehman from a smuggler who propositioned us to run oil for a Nazi submarine. And he said "submarine." It confirmed the fact that the Nazis have honeycombed the waterways and cays off the widest, most remote part of Central America and can use their preparations at will in a blitzkrieg of the Caribbean.

National Guard Mobilization Bill Is Passed

would be allowed between the end of these maneuvers and the start of active duty so that the men could attend to personal affairs.

Most, if not all, of the remaining National Guardsmen are expected to be called to active duty if congress enacts selective service legislation.

To Build Houses.

The War Department announced today that it was initiating a program to provide housing and recruiting shelters for 317,309 men at 34 army posts scattered throughout the country.

Additional shelter, the department said, is needed for the regular army and the National Guard under the present expansion program. It tied the construction program with the conscription proposal, however, by adding that appropriations to complete it "cannot be requested until full authority for calling the National Guard and legislation for selective service has been enacted."

Under the program, utilities and hospital facilities would be constructed at southern army posts to be used by men housed in tents. Cantonments — frame buildings such as those used at World War emergency camps—would be constructed at posts where the winter climate is too severe to permit use of tents.

Ease Hardships.

Before enacting the guard bill, congress inserted provisions designed to ease the hardships on individuals. It directed that men below the rank of captain, if they have dependents without other means of support, be permitted to resign, and that men under 18 be honorably discharged. It directed, too, that an employer must rehire an employe-guardsman when his period of active duty was ended.

Another restriction limits the service of the guardsmen to the western hemisphere, American possessions and the Philippine islands.

Meanwhile, Chairman Walsh, Democrat, Mass., of the naval committee, offered in the senate a resolution calling upon the secretary of war to supply the senate with confidential information on the army's present and prospective supply of airplanes, mechanized equipment and pilots. He said he would introduce a similar resolution later calling for information from the navy.

5,000 ACRES LEASED FOR ANTIAIRCRAFT UNIT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP) The War Department's real estate division disclosed today it had leased 5,000 acres as a starter on a projected Savannah, Ga., antiaircraft training center.

Officers said this tract was located about 30 miles southwest of Savannah. It was leased for one year, with an option to purchase.

Congress recently authorized the acquisition of property for the Savannah facility. Officers said a formal request for funds to make the purchases would be submitted to congress soon.

COLLEGE OPENING SET.

CARROLLTON, Ga., Aug. 23.—West Georgia College, a junior unit of the University System, will open its eighth annual session September 19, I. S. Ingram, president of the college, announced today. A third year of teacher-training work has been added to the curriculum through a Rosenwald fund grant.

Roosevelt Confers With Labor Foes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(UP) President Roosevelt today conferred with Daniel J. Tobin, head of the AFL Teamsters' Union, and Philip Murray, vice president of the CIO, giving rise to reports that he again is striving for peace between the rival labor organizations.

Neither Tobin nor Murray would comment. Tobin currently is one of Mr. Roosevelt's administrative assistants. He said he would like to say something, but that his White House post precluded it.

Schools To Get Pay Promptly, Collins Predicts

Permanent Financing Seen During This Year's Sessions.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 23.—Every day is bringing increased assurance that Georgia's schools will be put on a permanent financial basis during the coming scholastic year, State Superintendent M. D. Collins told teachers and students receiving degrees at summer session commencement exercises of the Georgia State College for Women.

"Only one thing is lacking to assure Georgia the school system which we have worked so hard to build," said Dr. Collins, who was principal commencement speaker. "That one thing is the permanent financing of our school terms.

"But each day more legislators are announcing their intention to see that Georgia teachers receive their back salaries, and that prompt pay is given to them at all times in the future. The situation is made even brighter by the fact that each of the four gubernatorial candidates has indorsed the school program."

Leaders in education throughout the state, he said, have worked diligently to aid the administration's current plans for school progress. Outlining Georgia's educational advancement during the past eight administrative years, he said educational funds have increased 134.5 per cent, from $6,633,162 in 1932 to $15,557,065 at present.

The state public school fund was said to have increased 130 per cent, from $4,188,215 to $9,637,000. A 75.9 per cent increase in the equalization fund—from $2,182,402 to $3,841,015—was reported, as well as a 147.9 per cent increase in federal vocational and rehabilitation funds from $262,544 to $651,105. A state text book and library fund of $1,427,944 also was reported to have been set up during that time.

"A vocational education program is a vital necessity in training our boys and girls today," Dr. Collins said. "And it is imperative that equal educational opportunities be given children regardless of what school they attend.

"To afford such equal opportunities, the equalization fund has supplied school monies on a basis of need. In addition, the school administration sought to provide longer school terms throughout Georgia, better trained and better paid teachers, an adequate supply of free textbooks, and closely knit co-operation between the State Education Department and local school authorities."

Civilians Flee Dover, Target Of Siege Guns

41,000 civilian population decided the famous Kent shore resort was unsafe—"the German gunnery is too poor to be healthy," one resident said. "The big shells may land anywhere"—and moving vans began trucking household possessions to havens farther inland.

Lone German raiders roved over England, Scotland and Wales, killing at least six civilians, and the British government formally charged that some of the Nazi planes made "indiscriminate machinegun attacks" on several areas.

Bombers Again Active.

The British air ministry again reported that the Royal Air Force had made another in a long series of successful raids over German and German-held territory. Bombed, the ministry announced, were these vital objectives:

A synthetic oil plant at Bottrop; an airplane factory at Frankfurt; a power station near Cologne; a munitions — high explosive — factory at Greisheim near Frankfurt; docks at the Rhine port of Duisburg; railway junctions at Mannheim and Coblenz; freight sidings at Hamm and Soest; 22 airdromes in Germany and the occupied territory.

Germany, concentrating on her "total" blockade, reported the sinking of a 15,000-ton British merchant ship and damage to others in moonlight raids on the Scottish coast.

Nine Are Killed In Crash of Army Bomber

Lightning Eliminated as Cause by Officers Studying Wreckage.

DENVER, Aug. 23.—(AP)—An army bomber—held to its course into a lightning-streaked cloudbank to avert possible collision with a sister ship—carried nine men to death as it crashed and exploded on a prairie 23 miles southeast of Denver.

Tonight, nearly 24 hours after the craft disappeared on a routine bombing mission, army officers picked through scattered bits of wreckage in an attempt to determine the cause. Lightning was eliminated.

Two officers and seven enlisted men were aboard the twin-motored B-18-A Douglas medium bomber as it fell near the bombing range it had headed for after taking off from Lowry Field, Air Corps technical school here. Its gasoline tanks, containing about 300 gallons, exploded as it struck the ground. Bits of the plane and bodies were thrown more than 300 yards.

DRIVERS CARELESS.

ROME, Ga., Aug. 23.—(AP)—Police Chief C. I. Harris has warned that motorists have been getting careless during the period when policemen were taking their vacations. All the men are back on duty now, he observed, and the speeding is to be stopped, pronto.

U. S. Is Urged To Store Oil Underground

Atlantic Seaboard Pipe Line Suggested as Defense Measure.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Storage of vital petroleum supplies in underground tanks to forestall their possible destruction by air attack was urged today by planners of the nation's defenses.

Robert E. Wilson, petroleum technologist of the National Defense Advisory Committee, suggested that plan to the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, here to study the oil industry's role in rearming America.

Wilson also suggested that the industry lay new pipe lines, especially along the Atlantic seaboard, to make it unnecessary to transport oil in tankers.

France To Have Prohibition for 3 Days a Week

Liquor Blamed for Defeat, Soldiers With Delirium Tremens.

VICHY, France, Aug. 23.—(UP)—The council of ministers tonight approved a decree establishing partial prohibition throughout France to end what was called "a disastrous era of alcoholism among French soldiers" that left them unfit to face the German blitzkrieg.

For eight months during the "phony war" when there was virtually no action on the western front the French troops drank tremendous quantities of alcohol, a spokesman said, and military authorities blame the widespread intoxication for much of the moral collapse of the soldiers.

The drinking produced nervous disorders and shellshock when the French forces finally came up against the Nazi mechanized forces, particularly such terrifying weapons as whistling bombs and swarms of tanks, it was said.

The new decree limits drinks to 16 degrees of alcoholic strength and provides for three nonalcoholic days each week.

French army chiefs were said to have been "astounded" at the spread of alcoholism when the army was mobilized. There were said to have been many "alcoholic accidents," including cases of delirium tremens and even death.

Mandamus Asked In Back-Tax Case

A mandamus action seeking to force Fulton county to collect $4,900 in back taxes from the Fulton National Bank was filed yesterday in Fulton superior court by Former Judge G. H. Howard Sr., in an attack on the constitutionality of a 1936 federal law affecting the taxation of the preferred stock of certain banks, including the Atlanta institution.

The county tax collector issued a fi. fa., against the bank in 1938 but never collected it because the bank contended its $500,000 worth of preferred stock was held by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and was not subject to taxation by the county.

Howard seeks to force Tax Collector Earl Suttles to levy on the bank's preferred stock and to collect the $4,900.

Bishop Candler Observes His 83d Birthday

His Health Is Better Now Than in Past Year and Half.

In the quietness of his home and surrounded by members of his immediate family, Bishop Warren A. Candler, beloved friend of Methodism, yesterday observed his 83d birthday.

The principal feature of the day that distinguished it from others was the flood of telegrams, cards, letters and telephone felicitations that were received at the Candler home, 1653 North Decatur road. They came from near and far.

John C. Candler, his oldest son, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Candler, son and daughter-in-law, spent the day with the venerable bishop and joined with him in observing another milestone in a long career devoted to Methodism.

Despite the bishop's 83 years he is in much better health now than at any time during the past year and a half, his son, John, said.

Bishop Candler was born on a farm near Villa Rica, Ga., August 23, 1857.

Defense Board Seeks To Use Idle Capital

Loan Plan Would Speed Production of Military Supplies.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(AP)—The Defense Commission offered a plan today designed to expedite manufacture of airplanes, munitions and other defense supplies with the aid of the nation's idle capital resources.

Under the plan, as described by John D. Biggers, deputy production commissioner, the government would offer manufacturers contracts which could be used for underwriting bank loans to finance factory construction for defense needs.

Concerns needing new plants, upon being awarded orders for defense goods, could obtain a contract in which the government would promise to pay the cost of erecting factories in five annual installments this government promise would be security for a bank loan for plant construction.

Biggers said that to make the plan effective, congress would have to approve a pending $5,000,000,000 defense appropriation bill.

TWA Will Fingerprint Workers as Precaution

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—(AP) Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., said today it had assigned two men to fingerprint its 2,400 employes from coast to coast.

The fingerprinting was undertaken, the company added, as another phase of its program to guard against possible sabotage. Recently a system of badge identification of employes was inaugurated to prevent unauthorized persons from entering TWA hangars.

Copies of the fingerprints are to be furnished the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Three Georgia Editors Given 50-Year Pins

tion to the Sandersville Progress.

Theron S. Shope trophy for the most fearless editorial published by a weekly newspaper—to the Sandersville Progress, published by Gordon Chapman. Second place was given to the Bulloch Herald, at Statesboro, and honorable mention to the Milledgeville Union Recorder, the Camilla Enterprise, the Georgia Guide and the Twiggs County New Era, at Jeffersonville.

Advertising Award.

Sam Wilkes Trophy for the best displayed advertising—to The Covington News, published by Belmont Dennis. An example of good workmanship in the get-up of ads. Liberal use of white space, and pleasing type combinations, combined with careful press work. Second place to The Cobb County Times, at Marietta; third place to The Douglas Enterprise, and honorable mention to The Bulloch Herald, The Dalton News, and The Bartow Herald, at Cartersville.

Hal N. Stanley Trophy for the most attractive typographical appearance—to The Bulloch Herald, at Statesboro, for its outstanding beauty due to the very neat and harmonious headline system, variety in make-up and excellent mechanical workmansip and press work. Second place to The DeKalb New Era, at Decatur; third place to The Douglas Enterprise, with honorable mention to The Dalton Citizen, Nashville Herald, and Bartow Herald.

W. Trox Bankston Trophy for the largest percentage of local news—to The Carroll Free Press, at Carrollton, published by C. A. Neeks. The per cent of local news in this interesting paper ranged from 40 to 54 per cent, an unusually high percentage. Second place to The Dalton Citizen; third place to The Bulloch Herald, and honorable mention to The Cedartown Standard, The Bartow Herald, and The Sandersville Progress.

Dalton News Wins.

Emory University Journalism Trophy for the best use of local pictures—to The Dalton News, published by L. A. Lee, and edited by Henry Hovin. The Dalton News is doing an excellent job in demonstrating the importance of pictures in building up reader interest. Second place to The Cobb County Times; third place to The Covington News, and honorable mention to The Milledgeville Union Recorder and The Dalton Citizen.

J. C. Williams Trophy for the best editorial page—to The Douglas Enterprise, because of the outstanding excellence of its editorial page in typographical appearance, the dominance of local editorials, and the variety. Second place to the Twiggs County New Era. Third place to the Covington News, and honorable mention to the Georgia Guide, the Harris County Journal, at Hamilton; the Carroll Free Press, and the Ellaville Sun.

Marietta Paper Cited.

W. G. Sutlive trophy for the most constructive community service—to the Cobb County Times at Marietta, published by Otis Brumby, and edited by Chess Abernathy. In its campaign to focus attention on the deplorable conditions in low-rent tenant houses of the city, the Times lived up to the highest ideals of the best community newspapers. The editor wrote a series of most vivid articles showing the squalor and unsanitary living conditions. Pictures were used freely. The city council, aroused by the drive, passed an ordinance setting up minimum sanitary provisions for all future dwellings, and later gave the police department sweeping authority to condemn hazardous, substandard dwellings. The landlords, voluntarily improved conditions. This was one of the finest services that a constructive newspaper can make. Second place to the Walton Tribune, at Monroe, published by Ernest Camp, for a six-point agricultural program that is worthy of the support of every newspaper in the south. Third place to the Adel News, with honorable mention to the Lavonia Times.

J. Roy McGinty, editor of the Calhoun Times, will accede to the wishes of his colleagues and continue as president of the editors for another year, it was reported here tonight.

Carswell Speaks.

Porter Carswell made a humorous address as a feature of the banquet tonight, and had an appreciative audience.

Before adjourning the Macon section of the convention today, a series of addresses and round-table discussions were held.

Dr. Spright Dowell, president of Mercer University, officially welcomed guests. Robert Scott, of McCann-Erickson, Inc., a national advertising organization, told editors to quit giving away valuable white paper space, but to consider their advertisers in a talk on "What Newspapers Need to Get More National Advertising."

Weekly and daily editors held separate meetings to discuss problems peculiar to their own fields, Jim C. Seymour, secretary-manager of the Georgia Association, presented "The National Advertising Problem"; Charles Emde, vice president and general manager of the American Press Association, spoke on "What the American Press Association Thinks." Regarding publication problems and their solution, Ted Woodyard, president of Woodyard Associates, Inc., gave the viewpoint of that organization.

Roundtable Speakers.

During the roundtable discussiosn following the addresses, W. H. McWhorter, of the DeKalb New Era and Decatur; Robert O'Kelly, of the Douglas County Sentinel; Tom Arnold, of the North Georgia Tribune, Clayton; Carr McLemore, of the Baxley Herald; Kirby Freeman, of the Eastman Advertiser; Frank O. Miller, of the Pembroke Journal, and Carl Broome, of the Brantley County Enterprise, Nahunta, participated.

The editors boarded a train for Savannah about noon, and arrived in Savannah about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. They were served luncheon on the train as guests of the Central of Georgia Railway.

Herschel V. Jenkins, editor of the News and Press, was toastmaster at the annual banquet.

Dave B. Turner, known affectionately as "Uncle Dave," one of the best story tellers among the editors, responded to the welcome address by Mayor Thomas Gamble, of Savannah, and John Paschall, editor of the Atlanta Journal, presented all past presidents of the association.

To Make Reports.

Albert Hardy Sr. will report during the business sessions tomorrow on the Georgia Press Institute, held annually at the Henry Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia. Otis Brumby is to report on a revision of the constitution and by-laws of the organization; Roy Emmett, of The Cedartown Standard, will report for his committee on "Newspaper Appreciation Week." Tom O'Kelly will make the report for the resolutions committee.

In the absence of Rush Burton, of the Lavonia Times, Chairman T. P. McCutcheon, of The Franklin News and Banner, will make the report of the memorial committee.

The party will be guests of Charles G. Day, manager of the DeSoto hotels at Savannah and Savannah Beach, at swimming and beach game parties during the afternoon and at dinner during the evening.

Press Association Holds First Macon Convention in 54 Years

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 23.—Georgia editors visited Macon for an annual convention this year for the first time in the 54-year history of the organization, William T. Anderson, editor The Macon Telegraph, was commending them for "finally seeing the light," and complaining that it took so long.

Homer Cobb, new editor of The Rome News Tribune, is attending his first Georgia Press convention. He is accompanied by Mrs. Cobb. The Cobbs are from Alabama, but show promises of becoming real Crackers.

Editor Tom Shytle, of The Adel News, had a place of honor at the speaker's table at Mercer. He was host to the convention in 1938.

Two young prospective editors have won the admiration of oldsters. Little Miss Carolyn Chism, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Chism, of Pelham, and Paul Trawick Jr., 14, son of Mrs. Paul B. Trawick, of Commerce. Chism is editor of the News and Mrs. Trawick edits the Commerce News, a chore in which she says young Trawick is exceedingly helpful.

Dyar Massey, director of public relations and alumni secretary of the University of Georgia; Claude Davidson, director of the news bureau, and Hoyt Ware, assistant editor of the University Press, helped John E. Drewry, director of the journalism school, represent the University of Georgia.

Stiles A. Martin, editor of the Market Bulletin, Department of Agriculture, was pointing out that for the first time in history no politics has colored the pages of the publication this year.

Down in Gray, Jones county, the newspaper is under petticoat control. Misses Etta and Vera Green, popular editors, arrived for convention sessions a bit late.

A near riot narrowly was averted this morning when editors awoke to find Hugh Trotti, vice president and business manager of The Constitution, still missing from convention sessions, and to cap the climax no copies of The Constitution, which Trotti hands out with his compliments. Macon news stands sold out hurriedly. Called by long distance, Trotti said the papers would be forthcoming this morning, and expressed his regrets that he could not be present because of the illness of Mrs. Trotti.

The two Frier boy editors were chesty during sessions. W. Ryan Frier, editor of The Bartow Herald, in Cartersville, is the father of an eight-weeks-old daughter, and not to be outdone, Thomas H. Frier, younger brother and editor of The Douglas Enterprise, came along four weeks later to announce the arrival of Thomas Jr.

Dr. John Allen, dean of the Mercer University school of journalism, was in a confiding mood during a lull in convention activities. He is president of the Men's Garden Club of Macon, but admits "my modest garden is about 12 feet square."

Dr. Warren G. Cutts, pastor of the Baptist church at Calhoun and chaplain of the press association, reverted to pleb days when delegates went to visit the Indian mounds. He was a student at Mercer, and had somewhat of a reputation for cutting classes. When found yesterday he smilingly said: "Cutts cuts again."

Ralph Ramsey, executive of the Georgia Education Association, is visiting convention sessions.

Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, and Ben T. Huiet, Georgia commissioner of labor, are among the visitors at the meetings.

Jack Williams, editor of the Waycross Journal-Herald and former president of the Georgia Press Association, arrived for the sessions, black bow and all. He, however, was not accompanied by his customary companion, Kirk Sutlive, also a former association president and editor of the Blackshear Times. Sutlive cannot attend the sessions this year, but sent his regrets.

Louis Griffin, youthful editor of the Eatonton Messenger, was introduced to delegates as Georgia's youngest editor, but Jere Moore, who did the honors, failed to say how old Griffith is.

'Unjust' Critics Of Newspapers Are Denounced

Savannah Mayor Sees Press as Protector of U. S. Rights.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 23.—(AP) Mayor Thomas Gamble tonight denounced "unjust, unfair criticisms of American newspapers and the manifest efforts and desires of some misguided people to limit their freedom, to put editors in straight jackets through fear."

The port city official told the Georgia Press Association "It will be a woeful day for our country, for the personal rights of the individual American, when editorial liberty of thought and of expression is hampered through political domination."

"More than ever, America's freedom today and for the future is bound up in the freedom of the press," Gamble declared. "The newspapers must continue America's greatest protection against influences that would destroy the supports on which our government—the government of our forefathers—and our individual rights as Americans, rest."

Evidently Mellowed.

Mayor Gamble said that Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes "has at times been unfortunately rather indiscriminate in his caustic criticism of newspapers. However, he has evidently mellowed a bit and recently has declared that the 'fairest and freeest" of the American newspapers are the weeklies, and has further graciously admitted that the weeklies "are sound at heart."

"He should go further and with equal candor concede that few, indeed, are the daily newspapers not entitled to the same praise.

"I think that Secretary Ickes, efficient administartor though he doubtless is of his department of the national government, must be suffering a bit from mental myopia and has acquired a distorted slant on the standards set up by the American press and its genuine devotion to principles of honor.

Reflect Character.

"I have known the Georgia press, dailies and weeklies as well, for over a half century and a Georgia editor or a Georgia publisher does not suffer by comparison with Mr. Ickes or other officeholders, or even those whose egos lead them to aspire to the title of statesman, in devotion to splendid ideals and in consecration to the public welfare of community, state or nation.

"I believe our Georgia editors reflect the character of the editors of other states.

"One can study our larger dailies, our small dailies, our army of weeklies, and soon learn for himself that the Georgia newspaper editor is not bound with chains to any cause except the cause of democratic liberties, the preservation of old American ideals, the maintenance of splendid standards of life and the upbuilding of the community along legitimate lines. To these purposes the Georgia editor stands willing to make any sacrifices necessary."

Mayor Gamble prepared his talk for the annual banquet of the Georgia Press Association at which the Savannah Morning News and Evening Press were hosts. The editors transferred their convention here from Macon today, after conferences on various problems of publication. They will conclude their meeting tomorrow.

ATLANTA, GA., AUGUST 24, 1940.

Should Be Explained

County Attorney Hughes Spalding, after careful and full study of the taxing system of Fulton, made certain recommendations, designed to make taxpaying easier upon the taxpayers of the county and to conserve the people's money by eliminating expense, where possible.

Among those recommendations was one that a number of employes be transferred from the tax investigators' office to that of the tax collector. Attorney Spalding stated, unequivocally, that it was unnecessary to employ any additional people and advised against increasing the pay roll.

Nevertheless the commission, meeting Thursday, transferred only two from the investigators' office and employed three new clerks, in addition, for the tax collector. Thus they completely disregarded the recommendations of the county attorney, ignoring his advice for economy and refusing to consider his plan, despite the fact it was only offered after a year of most painstaking and exhaustive survey of the situation.

The county commission may have had good reason for its action. It adds fuel, however, to a suspicion, long current among the citizens of the county, that increases on the county pay roll are more apt to be the result of a desire for political advantage than of real business necessity.

Certainly, the people of the county are entitled to a full explanation, by the commission, for the addition of new employs to the county pay rolls at the Thursday meeting. In addition to the three added clerks to the tax collector office, a typist was hired for the jury commission, two new deputy sheriffs to act as clerks at Fulton tower, and a night record clerk for the police department.

There may be, as stated, good business reasons for this increase in the county pay roll, at this time. However, the salaries are paid with the money of the people and those same people are entitled to know, in full, why this new expense should be obligated. Especially in regard to the tax collector office which, Attorney Spalding had found, could be provided without the need of a single additional employe.

Incidentally, the money for this added expense was taken from the $50,000 set up as the county's share of the cost of eliminating the dangerous grade crossing on West North avenue, for which the federal government has appropriated $500,000.

This crossing has taken uncounted lives in recent years. The commission, it is understood, believes it can replenish the underpass fund out of next year's budget.

The people, in the meantime, wonder why the delay in preliminary work for the underpass and, if this spending of the $50,000 fund on other purposes should prove to endanger the federal work on the project, there will be a protest that will be heard from one end of the county to the other.

The commission is due explanation to its employers, the people, and that explanation should be both prompt and convincing, if current suspicions of autocratic "politicking" are to be refuted.

The world market shot, vast food surpluses loom in both Americas unless Mr. Ford can think of a way to make a car of the leftovers.

Among interesting late arrivals in our midst is one of the fabulous family of Rothschild, as a refugee, possibly from an old Arliss film.

Now it's the secretary of the League of Nations who resigns, at Geneva. Eventually, that palace should be the world's largest haunted house.

Always a poignant moment in the affairs of the political outs is when the gallant candidate gets his first good look at the farm problem, and slowly backs away.

Willkie tells an Iowa crowd he is all for decentralizing industry. Fancy the invading bomber, trying to spot a munitions plant among the tall corn.

In a war of nerves, what has Hitler to do about a people who headline a 500-plane raid on a suburban airport as "Incident at Croydon"?

Why Not Stand?

Because of the war in Europe there has been a renewed interest, in this country, in patriotism and in understanding of the foundations and ideals of the democracy in which we live. Classes in patriotism are being held, for children and for adults alike, and stress is being laid upon respect for the flag and proper observance of those outer forms which symbolize the inner heart of man.

This being true, why is it that few, if any, people rise to their feet when the national anthem, the "Star-Spangled Banner," is played in a public place? This is true of this section of the country, at least.

New York has adopted the practice of audience standing, before every theatrical performance, while the "Star-Spangled Banner" is played.

In one of Atlanta's largest theaters, the other evening, the anthem was played. The place was crowded, yet only six people, as far as could be seen, arose to their feet.

The reason, of course, is innocent ignorance of the custom and, in some cases, embarrassment about doing anything, in public, the others present do not.

In all other countries it is the constant rule to stand during the playing of the national anthem. "God Save the King" is played at every public gathering in England—even at church services—and the rising of all those present to their feet is automatic.

To so stand indicates the reverence all loyal citizens feel for their national heritage, symbolized by music or by flag. It is not the notes or the tune, not the material in the flag, we honor. It is the intangible spirit of the nation of which we are a part, our love for all it means and our devotion to the upholding of its cause.

Let us, as Americans, forget self-consciousness and stand, wherever we may be, when our national anthem is played in public and thus set better example to those, thoughtless or unaccustomed to the practice, who sit, callow and unrealizing.

"Sweetbreads for Brains"

Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, during the brief senate debate on legislation permitting American ships to remove children from the war zones under safe-conduct pledges from the belligerents, declared that any nation or any individual who puts any dependance upon Hitler's word "has, indeed, sweetbreads for brains."

The Arizonan pungently expressed a fact that should be fully realized by the whole world, by this time. Hitler has broken every pledge he ever made, if he saw fit so to do and there is no reason whatever for believing any future promises by him will be any more faithfully kept.

The senate voted to permit American ships to bring war-refugee children across the Atlantic. The vote was unanimous, thus demonstrating to a war-stricken world that the sympathetic heart of America still beats. It would be unthinkable for any decent human being, American or otherwise, to place any hindrance in the road to sanctuary for innocent children caught in the maelstrom of war.

Yet, passage of the enabling legislation is far different from accomplishment of the program. The waters around Europe are bristling with ships of war, alive with submarines and dotted with floating mines. Even under the most favorable condition there can be no such thing as safety, today, for any vessel which plows those waters. Britain has done excellently in keeping her ocean lanes open. The convoy system has kept a steady flow of food, munitions, materials of war and other supplies pouring into British ports.

This, however, is under the convoy plan, with protection of alert warships for each group of merchant ships.

There could be no such convoy for American vessels, regardless of the merciful nature of their voyage. The only reliance for safety would be upon the ability of the navigating officers to keep clear of the deadly mines and upon the faith of the belligerent nations to keep their pledge not to molest the American mercy ships.

And Senator Ashurst, succinctly, forcefully and truthfully described how much faith could be placed on the word of one belligerent at least, Adolf Hitler.

Editorial of the Day

THE "NEW ORDER"

(From The Des Moines Register.)

It could be reasonably argued that our real chance of maintaining for a considerable time "peaceful relations" with Hitler, if he puts Britain down, would be to go totalitarian ourselves and do in this hemisphere, by force, what he is doing in Europe and what Japan is trying to do in Greater East Asia. That is the essence of what some of the Nazis have actually suggested to us. It would be part of the "new order" that they propose as a successor to "capitalist democracy" everywhere—organization of the world, in great regional units, by force, under command of master nations, all of which repudiate freedom. America won't do this. Nor would this promise, for any length of time, peace anyhow. It is going to be a troubled world no matter how things turn. But the least desperately troubled one, for us, will be one in which Hitler has not succeeded in crushing Britain. There would be no sense in declaring war in order to help ourselves by helping Britain. That wouldn't work out helpfully. But we shall be very, very stupid if we do not in other ways that are open to us stiffen the British chance of resisting.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

THE FAKE TAX BILL WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Although the present tax muddle is gravely delaying the national defense program, it is no exception to the rule that every controversy over taxation has an element of farce. The comedy arises, in this instance, from the use of the tax muddle by one group of interested parties as a stick to beat business with, while another group earnestly belabors the President with the same weapon.

The first group's theory is that businessmen are wicked to refuse armament orders without assurance of tax concessions making plant expansion financially safe. A "sit-down strike" by business is charged, despite the fact that the procurement officers of the army and navy, the members of the National Defense Commission, the secretary of the Treasury and the President himself all agree that the businessmen's demand for tax concessions is justified.

The theory of the second group is that the President is wicked to have insisted on coupling the tax concessions with an excess profits tax, which takes much time to draft. This charge is made despite the fact that the President reached his decision in fear of punitive taxation of business. For a survey of the congressional situation revealed that, if the tax concessions were proposed in a separate bill, the isolationists would raise the cry of "war profiteers" and might succeed in loading the measure with amendments disastrous to the very businessmen needing aid.

The curious thing is that neither of the two agitated groups has discovered the real fault in the tax bill. This is that the revenue-raising section of the bill is a fake, ostensibly intended to pay for a reasonable share of the American defense effort, but actually likely to raise less than $200,000,000 annually.

SIMPLE HISTORY The history of the tax muddle is similar to the histories of all other tax muddles, being, in a word, muddled during the winter. A severe and ill-considered excess profits tax passed by the senate was expunged from the tax law in conference, on condition the Treasury study the problem and report on it. The report was originally due in 1941, but in July the President suddenly decided that the expansion of the armament program made immediate taxes necessary. An excess profits tax was what he asked.

The Treasury, bracing itself after the shock, speeded up its studies. Excess profits tax schedules were nearly completed when William S. Knudsen and other members of the Defense Commission informed Secretary Henry Morgenthau Jr. and the President that tax concessions would also have to be made to business in order to expedite the rearmament program. Both the President and Morgenthau accepted Knudsen's contention fully. The already-mentioned survey of the congressional situation was made. And it was decided that, despite the need for haste on the tax concessions, the danger from the isolationists made it necessary to join concessions and excess profits taxes in a single bill.

DELAY AND CONFUSION So far, all was well. The congressional tax leaders, however, were far from anxious to handle any sort of tax bill in an election year, and seem to have found the Treasury schedules too severe. As drawn at the Treasury, the excess profits taxes were based on invested capital and average earnings, and were calculated to raise from $500,000,000 to $700,000,000 annually. With the help of the house and senate committee experts, the congressional tax leaders redrafted the bill, inserting an alternative method of figuring the taxes on average earnings alone. Under the new bill, corporations are permitted to employ whichever system they chose. The Treasury, wisely believing every sane corporation would use the cheapest, estimates the new bill will yield at most $190,000,000 the first year.

In view of the vast expenditures involved in the national defense program, even the original bill yielding between $500,000,000 and $700,000,000 only scratched the surface of the tax problem. The congressional redraft is an obvious sham, intended to persuade the people that national defense was being paid for, yet to give as little pain as possible to interests powerful in politics.

In discussions with the congressional tax leaders, at cabinet meetings, and everywhere else he could find a listener, Secretary Morgenthau has complained bitterly against the new bill. He and the President have agreed, however, that in view of the dire need to push some sort of bill through and get the tax concessions into the law, they could not afford to fight about the nature of the excess profits tax. Unhappily, Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, and several like-minded senators are preparing to raise unshirted hell in the senate anyway. So the tax muddle is ending, as all tax muddles do, in misrepresentation, delay and confusion.

Tulip Time In Holland.

Many are the sadnesses that have come to the world since the ascendancy of Hitler and his Nazis in Germany and the subsequent campaigns of conquest which have carried the crooked cross of Nazidom over such wide areas of Europe.

There is one loss, however, which must come with extra poignancy to every lover of beauty and to every keeper of a garden.

It has been announced that the Nazi masters have decreed that the world-famous tulip fields of Holland and of Belgium be plowed up and that the land be devoted to the growth of grain, vegetables or some other food crop, instead of the bulbs of loveliness that have brought beauty and delight to every corner of the world.

Tulips will still bloom in our American gardens. The bulbs are propagated, commercially, in many parts of America, especially California.

But there is something of exquisite sorrow in the thought of the eclipse, no matter how temporary, of the tulip industry from the land which gave it fame.

The history of tulip growing in Holland is fascinating and fantastic. It is not my purpose to give it here. However, you'll find it worth your study, even though you go no further than a good encyclopedia. And there have been several fascinating novels with the Dutch tulip for their theme.

With so many world markets closed, and with the urgent need for foodstuff in the occupied countries, this winter, it is easy to understand why the Germans consider grain more important than tulips. But it is one more score, one more count against the Nazis, to be remembered until some happier day. They have destroyed so much beauty, real and intangible, in the world, haven't they?

I'd Like To Know Why.

Once again the riveters are playing their horrendous crescendos just outside my window. The rat-tat-tat of the hammers makes it difficult, once again, to arrange the words in decent order.

This time they are tearing up the paving on the south approach to the Forsyth viaduct. Unless my memory is playing me a silly trick, I recollect this paving was laid only two or three months ago. It looks perfectly good to me. And so I'd like to know the why of the present operation.

I'm probably sticking my neck out, but is it true what one onlooker told me? That they have a rule about tearing up all new paving, after a month or two, to see if it was laid properly? That sounds like one of those rules that would go on into eternity, to me.

He Knows The Women.

Something came up the other day that recalled to mind a piece of psychology told to me many years ago. It came from the lips of the judge of a minor court in one of the cities I worked in before ever I came to Atlanta.

This judge was talking about the types of cases that came before him for adjudication. Mostly misdemeanors, calling for a fine of a few dollars, at most.

In the course of conversation the talk centered on women offenders. You know, the good women who appeared in court to answer to some small offense. Most of them sent on their way with a warning and no fine at all.

But the judge said something to this effect:

"I've found," he said, "that a woman is perfectly satisfied if you let her have her say, without interruption. I ought to know, I've been married a long time. And the only last word I ever had around my home is 'Yes, my dear.'

"So, if a woman defendant appears before me and I allow her to talk all she desires, and then fine her a few dollars, she goes away perfectly contented. On the other hand, if I cut them short in their explanations and excuses, it doesn't matter that I let them go without any fine at all. They leave the court mad at me, anyway.

"For years I've made it practice to let them talk their fill, tell their full stories. Nowadays it doesn't matter how much I fine 'em, they go away saying, 'Isn't he the nicest judge?' regardless."

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Tuesday, August 24, 1915:

"Washington, August 23.—Four days have passed since a German submarine sank the White Star liner Arabic, with the loss of two American lives, and the American government still is without detailed and official information necessary to shape its course."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Sunday, August 24, 1890:

"A Georgia editor who is building a railroad says he will soon be able to furnish his brethren with free passes. But as the road will only cover a distance of 10 miles, and is far removed from many of them, it will take them six month's steady walking to get to it."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

More On Ickes NEW YORK, Aug. 23—When Harold Ickes goes into one of his political tantrums it takes days and days to pick up after him. We haven't had a man since Huey Long who leaves as much debris of as many kinds.

But willing hands make light work, as the fellow said, and today's doing will just about complete the job of sweeping and tidying after his recent defense of the dignity of the presidential office.

In the course of that seizure of statesmanship Mr. Ickes, defending, in a negative way, the corruption of the Chicago and Jersey City gangs, which set the moral and social standard of the recent hoodlums' old home week, in which he participated in Chicago, declared that the New Deal, or Social Democratic party, was responsible for the reform of Kansas City and the imprisonment of Commendatore Tomaso Pendergast, the honored friend of Benito Mussolini. With that mighty and reckless swipe Mr. Ickes knocked the statue of truth off the family whatnot; for the fact is that the party of humanity, in which Mr. Ickes is proud to collaborate with the hoodlum government of Chicago, avoided the initiative in the proceedings against Mr. Pendergast.

Newspapers Did Job The party of humanity had knowingly accepted the political benefits of Mr. Pendergast's grafting and vote-stealing machine and did not turn against the commendatore until a staff of first-class newspaper reporters and writers, under the direction of Roy Roberts of the Kansas City Star, turned up the evidence and compelled the Department of Justice to act.

The prosecution was then conducted by Maurice Milligan, the federal district attorney, with the good and hearty co-operation of the intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Department—an ornery and intractable bureau which is hell on facts and evidence and, generally speaking, insensitive to politics. The intelligence unit, because of its political indifference, sometimes comes into conflict with a coy or bashful attitude at the Department of Justice, which has a lively political sense.

Mr. Milligan and Governor Stark, also Democrats, both contributed to the destruction of the machine which had given valuable help to Mr. Ickes' party, but Mr. Milligan, who actually sent Pendergast and many of his assistant corruptioneers to prison, honestly and openly acknowledged that the credit for the initiative belonged to the Kansas City Star and the staff. They did the spade work and made it necessary for the government to act.

And In Louisiana The political sensitiveness of the Department of Justice was apparent in the celebrated second Louisiana Purchase. There the intelligence unit got together evidence on which indictments were returned against some of Huey Long's colleagues, and one crook was sent to prison, at a time when Huey was misbehaving. But after Huey was killed and the surviving thieves came out to parley under a flag of true Mr. Ickes' party of humanity made a treaty with them, the details of which are not known, because it was not an open covenant, openly arrived at, but a furtive political job. The effects were plain, however. The Department of Justice compromised some of the cases on cash terms, and the remaining indictments were dismissed on the ground that there had been a change of atmosphere.

Mr. Ickes' party then made fellowship with the crooks who now considered that they had received a federal charter to rob both the federal and state governments and really went to town. They were thieving away like city slickers at a county fair, with no interference from Mr. Ickes' party until Mr. Jim Crow, the editor of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, like Mr. Roberts in Kansas City, also assisted by good reporters, caught them so flagrantly and scandalously that again, as in Kansas City, there was nothing to do but prosecute.

Again, The Newspapers The initiative here also was left to a newspaper editor and his staff, proceeding without subpoena powers of police authority and at considerable personal risk, although the government has very strong powers for such work and half a dozen detective agencies with police authority.

Mr. Ickes chided Wendell Willkie because Moe Annenberg, one of the master crooks of the age, was a Republican newspaper publisher and sideline politician of no petty influence and boasted, with reasonable pride, that it was the party of humanity which turned him up and sent him to prison.

That is correct, but he forgot to say that the crooked horse-gambling system, of which Annenberg was the national boss, has for years enjoyed a status comparable to that of a necessary public utility in Chicago and Jersey City under the toleration of Mayors Ed Kelly and Frank Hague, whose political collaboration Mr. Ickes enjoyed in bringing off, with such illustrious success, hoodlums' old home week, or party convention, in Chicago.

Posts Cause Queries.

Farmers of Cornwall have had to do more explaining recently regarding the stone pillars doting the open fields. They have had to assure strangers the tall posts were not intended as protection against the landing of enemy airplanes. Before the war they had to answer inquiries from archaelogists. The pillars were erected years ago, says a Nottingham report, because of the scarcity of trees, to give horses and cattle something to rub against.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

NOT MUCH DIFFERENCE NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 23.—If one alights from a train in New York City at the Grand Central Station, one could walk through a tunnel to Mr. Wendell Willkie's hotel, or go through another tunnel to the hotel housing the headquarters of the National Democratic Committee.

From the window of the Democratic headquarters one almost can look into Mr. Willkie's window.

It is somewhat symbolic. Try as they will to make a difference, there isn't much of a gulf between the political beliefs of the two men. At least there is not so much difference that an agile liberal, if not suffering from lumbago, couldn't hop from one political belief to another.

There is a book out today called "This Is Wendell Willkie." It is a collection of his speeches and writings and contains the Elwood speech of acceptance.

In it one may find that Mr. Willkie believes free enterprise should be regulated. This cost him the support of some of the more rabid Republicans. He also repeats his support of aid to farmers as now administered, federal pensions, old-age benefits, unemployment insurance and other New Deal measures.

He comes out strongly against indiscriminate spending; he disclaims hatreds and personalities, but humanly deals in a few personalities. I think Mr. Willkie is honest and that the nomination was an excellent thing for the nation. But actually, there is not much difference in the political issues as between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie.

TWO PERSONALITIES The Republicans are playing heavily on Mr. Willkie's background. His homespun Indiana youth is being pushed to the front over and against Mr. Roosevelt's background as the son of wealthy parents.

This is what caused the best rock-thrower in the nation, Mr. Ickes, to speak of Mr. Willkie as a simple, barefoot Wall Street lawyer. There are many who do not admire Mr. Ickes, but there is none to say he cannot throw rocks with any of the rock-throwers in the Republican brigades who speak and write sneeringly of the President's wealthy background.

Actually, the campaign is going to be between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie more than it is to be a Republican-Democratic contest. Their personalities largely will determine the contest.

You will find many Republicans here who are going to vote for Mr. Willkie and who yet do not approve of him. They wish he were not so much of a New Dealer. They would prefer he had not mentioned control and regulation of free enterprises. They regret he did not damn all the New Deal.

Some of them think he is too smart-alecky in discussing the campaign. They wish he'd cease speaking about meeting the "champ," and they hope he will quit using some of his wise-cracking phrases. They would prefer their candidate to be more dignified. Nevertheless, they are going grimly down the line with him. They can't mention "that man" without growing red in the face and sending their blood pressures up.

Best of the true stories is that of the wealthy New York dowager who has given up and gone to Bermuda. She was strong for Willkie until she heard him speak from Elwood. The Republican candidate's enunciation and his speech generally distressed her no end. "It is tragic," she said, "that 'that man' should speak such perfect English and our candidate should have that awful midwestern voice."

Willkie gained among those who read his Elwood speech, but lost among those who listened to it on the air. His managers say the man was all but out on his feet, so exhausted was he from greeting people and from work on the speech.

RUNNING AGAINST HITLER It is well known that many one-time Democrats, largely those who opposed the President in 1936 and 1938, have again deserted the party.

But today I found a Republican who was for Roosevelt. He had voted for Republicans all his voting days, but this year he will vote for Roosevelt.

"This fellow Willkie," he said, "is running against Roosevelt. But Roosevelt is running against Hitler and I sure don't want that guy to be elected."

Everyone seems to feel the war will have a definite effect. Should England lose, Roosevelt will win. Should England still be holding out in November, and show signs of growing stronger, then Willkie will be helped.

Most business leaders are supporting Willkie. Reports here are to the effect that several millions of dollars will be spent, without any of it coming to the attention of Willkie or his managers, in New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois. Willkie's stand against government ownership of power companies has given him the support of a great majority of businessmen in America.

Here his headquarters say upper New York surely will put in enough votes to offset the New York City vote and thereby carry New York for Willkie.

Today I saw Ed Flynn, newly appointed national Democratic chairman. He insists that things are all right; that they look as good for Roosevelt at this time as they did at the same time in 1936.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad To His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My dear Louise:

Your idea isn't your own. You have read that our vast wealth-soaked land no longer provides opportunity, and then swallowed the idea without either investigation or thinking.

It doesn't matter in one way, for you aren't looking for a job, but I hate to have you blaming the country for the faults of humans. That is the alibi of failure.

Last winter I talked with a man who owns a one-horse manufacturing concern in a non-union town and normally employs five men. He pays them $17 a week.

When he told me this and I showed surprise, he said he could pick up as many as he needed at that wage.

"I have paid more," he said. "I had a good man working for me last year and would have paid him almost anything, but he left for greener pastures.

"When he told me he was quitting, I offered him thirty a week. When that didn't interest him, I suggested that we both sleep over it, and next morning I got big-hearted and offered to give him a half interest in the business. That was the smartest thing I ever did, but it didn't work. He's head of a big concern now."

Further inquiry revealed a flattering portrait of this paragon.

In the first place, he was a skilled workman who loved his job and needed no bossing because he knew what to do and how to do it. Also he was able to wait on customers who dropped in, or even go out and get business when more was needed.

He had a "good personality," which in this case meant that people liked him. He wasn't a noisy and back-slapping good fellow, but he was friendly and his self-confidence gave him poise, so he not only felt at ease himself but made other people feel that way. We all like to deal with a man who knows his business.

So far as I could learn, the paragon had no other equipment—and there are thousands who have everything he had. It is the equipment of success.

I don't care what calling a fellow chooses, whether he farms or practices medicine or sells hot dogs, if he knows his job and loves it and works hard and is blessed with good sense, he has all the opportunity men ever had and he is certain to succeed.

How can you doubt it when thousands are proving it every year by doing it?

Love,
DAD.

West Proposes Tax Relief for Drafted Men

City, State and County Officials Are Urged To Take Action.

Heads of state, county and city governments yesterday were requested to declare a moratorium on taxes against young men called into military service.

George West, president of the United States Savings & Loan League, wrote Governor Rivers, Mayor Hartsfield, and the county authorities of Fulton and DeKalb asking them to sponsor tax relief for persons who are compelled to quit their ordinary jobs and accept nominal pay for service to their country.

"I know that your good office does not want to see the homes of our young citizenry jeopardized in any manner at all and I know that you will concur with me in the belief that your Atlanta constituency will support such a move," West wrote in his letter to Hartsfield.

"Taxes on the homes of the young men called to service will "appear insurmountable," West stated. He added his experience was that any tax exemptions of this nature would have to originate in the offices of the city, county and state officials.

'Hitler' Dropped From Mountain

Residents of Stone Mountain early yesterday morning set out to rescue "a body" which apparently had fallen over the steep side of the famous cliff, but returned only with a crude effigy of Adolf Hitler.

The "body" first attracted attention Thursday night when picnickers saw the dark object swinging far below the top of the mountain and "thought" they heard cries for help.

DeKalb Policemen V. B. Hill and C. W. Austin took ropes and pulleys and searched for the "body," but the image is all they found. It was complete with mustache and diagonal forelock, dressed in brown trousers, a grey shirt and black boots.

Rivers Gives Pardons to Five Fulton Convicts

Two Others Included in Group Freed by Governor.

Five prisoners convicted in Fulton county have been granted conditional pardons by Governor Rivers, records in the executive offices showed yesterday.

Among those receiving clemency was Mrs. Martha Murphy, who was convicted on charges of issuing fraudulent checks at the June, 1940, term of Fulton superior court. She was given three 12-month sentences, to run consecutively. The pardon order pointed out that Mrs. Murphy was old and in bad health and that her daughter in South Carolina wanted her to come and live with her.

Tom Phillips, sentenced to two years on assault charges in July of this year, was granted a pardon on the grounds it was recommended by prosecutrix, her father, mother, grandfather, two sisters, two uncles and a brother-in-law.

Floyd Cullin alias Collins was pardoned of robbery convictions for which he had been given 20 years, in seven cases to run concurrently. He was convicted at the May term, 1933, and the March term, 1934. Paroled in 1936 by the Governor and prison commission, he later was sentenced to serve two years in the federal penitentiary for the sale of untaxed liquor, his parole being revoked June 5, 1939. He will be released at Louisburg, Pa.

J. I. Jackson, who was one of the five granted pardons, was convicted in July, 1936, and sentenced four to 10 years. He escaped one time in April, 1938. Representative citizens recommended his clemency and penal officials testified to his good conduct.

George Muckle, the fifth to receive a conditional pardon, was convicted in May, 1940, of lottery charges and given a 10-month sentence. The order said that at the time the case was set to come to trial in 1936 Muckle was in Florida, was not notified and his bond of $300 was forfeited. The order added that he had paid $255 of the $300 bond.

Others pardoned included Erskine Jordan, convicted of burglary charges in Clarke county, after serving six years of his 20-year sentence, and Karl Hoye, sentenced to 12 months in Lowndes county for drunkenness.

Robert Russell Visits Here in His New Capacity

Robert L. Russell, of Winder, sworn in Monday in Gainesville as an additional United States judge for the northern district of Georgia, paid his first visit to Atlanta yesterday in his new capacity.

Ducking into the federal building for a few minutes, Judge Russell signed a warrant moving W. L. Dollar from Atlanta, where he was recently arrested, to Birmingham, where he is wanted to answer charges of transporting a stolen automobile across a state line.

First Execution For Robbery Held in State

Eddie Brown Dies Under Georgia's Three-Year-Old Law.

REIDSVILLE, Ga., Aug. 23.—(AP) — Eddie Brown, 30-year-old Valdosta Negro, died in Georgia's big green electric chair today—the first person to pay the extreme penalty under a three-year-old law exacting death for armed robbery.

The Negro, who was born in Thomasville, Ga., died at 11:15 o'clock this morning after two jolts of current coursed through his body.

He was convicted in Lowndes county superior court last May 27 of the armed robbery of a filling station in which Elzia Rykard, young white man, was wounded.

The Georgia legislature, in extra session in late 1937, enacted a law providing death for armed robbery. Several months later three white youths were sentenced to death at Adel, Ga., after pleading guilty before Superior Judge Will R. Smith to charges of armed robbery. Numerous high officials of Georgia and Florida pleaded for mercy from Governor Rivers, and he commuted the sentences to life imprisonment.

Warden E. B. Henderson said another Negro, Charles Josey, followed Brown to the chair and was pronounced dead at 11:28. He was convicted of murder in Pike county. Neither Negro made any statement.

Relief From Eye Strain

L. N. HUFF OPTICAL CO.

54 Broad St., N. W., Healey Building

Good Morning—By Louie D. Newton

Sunday's lesson, II Samuel 12:1-14 and 32:1-11, is a picture of David falling into a terrible sin, confessing faithfully his wrong, and coming back again to a consciousness of the goodness and mercy of the Lord. The golden text, taken from the Epistle of James, is a revealing statement of confession and forgiveness, "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed."

Convicted by the prophet Nathan of having broken the Sixth and Seventh Commandments in his relation to Uriah and Bathsheba, David confessed his sin unto the Lord, and was then able to sing that exquisite hymn of peace in Psalm 32.

Famous throughout the world as a successful King, David slipped. The horror of his terrible sin one does not need to describe. It involved every conceivable form of iniquity. One is amazed that a man of such fine quality of mind and heart could commit such a reprehensible sin. It only serves to remind us each how subtle and shrewd is Satan.

Nathan was a courageous man. It is not an easy thing for a man to go to a King and tell him his faults. Nathan went in the strength of the Lord. He told the King the truth, and David couldn't deny it. We may fool the folks, but we can't fool God.

David was a man after God's own heart, not because he committed this great sin, but because he was willing to confess it and throw himself upon the mercy of a forgiving God, seeking by His help to redress the wrong and walk uprightly. Not only does David confess his sin, but he earnestly pleads for cleansing. Note passages from David's prayer:

"Create in me a clean heart. . . . Renew a right spirit within me. . . . Take not Thy Holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvataion. . . . Uphold me with a willing spirit."

Then David asked for power to go in the will of the Lord. He knew well enough that Satan would strip him again and again if he undertook to live in his own strength and by his own wisdom.

We are first to confess our sins unto God, and then we are to confess them one to another. That is the way of peace and happiness. David was a man after God's own heart because David followed that course.

It is a tremendous lesson—one that we need to prayfully consider, examining our own hearts to see if there is any evil way within us that we have failed to bare to God. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." John 1-9.

YOU CAN'T STOP IT !

Since the cave man sat by the carcass
Of the wild beast he had slain
And gorged himself on the putrid meat
'Til his belly squirmed with pain;
And another man, wild and hairy,
Crept behind him in the night
To crack his skull with a stone-axe dull
Men have always had to fight.

When our lives are quiet and peaceful
And the stream runs calm and cool,
Somewhere in the world's broad boundaries
There's growing some sullen fool,
Some mad man obsessed with the notion
He's destined to rule the world
'Til he is stayed by the just man's blade
And his pirate flag is furled.

Then . . . home come the conquering heroes
Be-scarred and with medals hung;
They are gods in the eyes of women
And loud are their praises sung,
Then the flower of romance blossoms—
Forgotten are death and pain—
Each takes a wife for the span of life
And the war starts over again!

Amplified Monkey

Explorer-naturalist in South America tells us the howling monkeys of the jungles wear loudspeakers or amplifiers hidden under their voluminous whiskers. This enables a howling monkey to howl pianissimo and have it come out fortissimo, just as a sweet soprano which would hardly carry across the living room sounds like Flagstad after it has passed through the microphone and the builder-upper amplifiers.

It may be that the inventor of the loudspeaker had been given a pet howling monkey and conceived the idea from him—or her, as the case may be. Certainly the first of those devices, attached by wires to a part of the radio and set up on top of the bookcase, could outhowl any monkey. It could have made a gorilla sound like a canary in comparison.

This scientific item from the jungle may explain what goes on in our neighborhood. Folks on our side of the street had an idea the family on the other side and a bit up—or down—the hill, merely turned on the front room radio to the last notch and then went out into the backyard to enjoy it, generously sharing their entertainment with the adjacent blocks.

But perhaps this is unfair. Maybe it isn't a radio but a howling monkey with a soundbox behind his whiskers. And one can't complain about that. Especially if one keeps a dog which bays the moon and protests raucously against cars and trucks using the street in front of his home.

'Round and 'Round

Widely circulated syndicate item reveals that minute hand on the tower of the Metropolitan building in Manhattan weighs a ton and jumps a foot every minute. You can watch it jump a foot. Each hour it jumps 60 feet. Each day it jumps 1,440 feet. Ever on the jump!

Moral there, about energy and whatnot. Keep jumping and you'll get somewhere.

But the story doesn't explain that the jumping minute hand must start over again every 24 hours—from right where it started from.

I can't extract much inspiration from a one-ton clock hand that goes around and around and never gets anywhere. Too many folk keep going around in circles, anyway. And never get anywhere, like this masterpiece of thought.

Washington columnist says people with money will vote for Willkie. Why go to the expense of counting the vote?

Problem for nature students as reported in Pickens County Progress:

"A chicken at a tourist camp near Chatsworth sleeps all day and rambles all night. But a lot of strange things can happen around a tourist camp."

Trackless Trolleys

It's an awkward name—as the old "horseless carriage" was. Maybe a better one will turn up.

Anyway, they replace the old street cars on the Buckhead and Oglethorpe lines which I ride frequently. And I'm glad.

Habitual motorists are even gladder. Trackless cars keep pretty well to the right, swing into the curb at stops—and an automobile can pass them on the left. Which will make a lot of difference. Stopping the new vehicles to let passengers on or off won't hold up 40 automobiles which couldn't dash past in time.

The trackless cars have been running between Hapeville and town for more than a year and seem to be giving satisfaction. If they did not the company would hardly invest in them for Buckhead-Oglethorpe run.

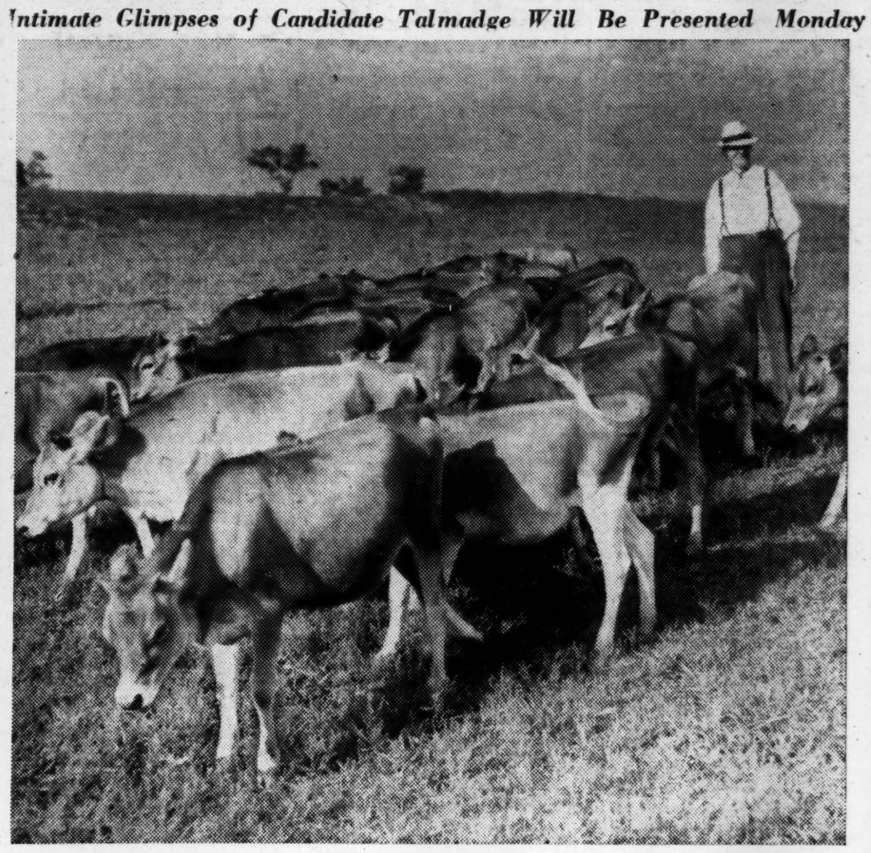
GIDDAP, MAUDE Commissioner of Agriculture Columbus Roberts, who plans to step up to the Governor's seat next term, is a true son of the soil. If you have doubts, take a peek at him perched on this mower, minus coat and collar. He is busy mowing a crop of alfalfa on his fertile farm acres out Ben Hill way.

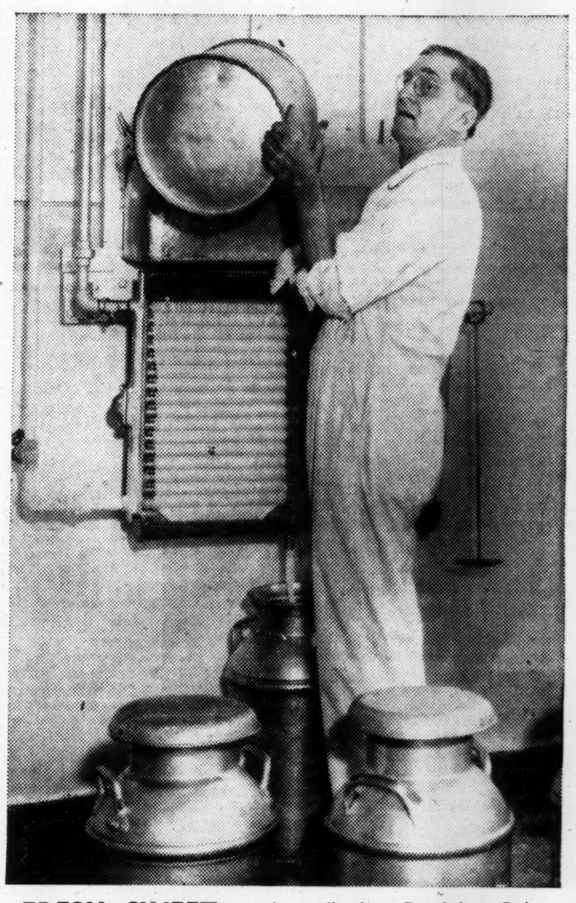
Roberts Scans Pure-Bred Herd

Intimate Glimpses of Candidate Talmadge Will Be Presented Monday



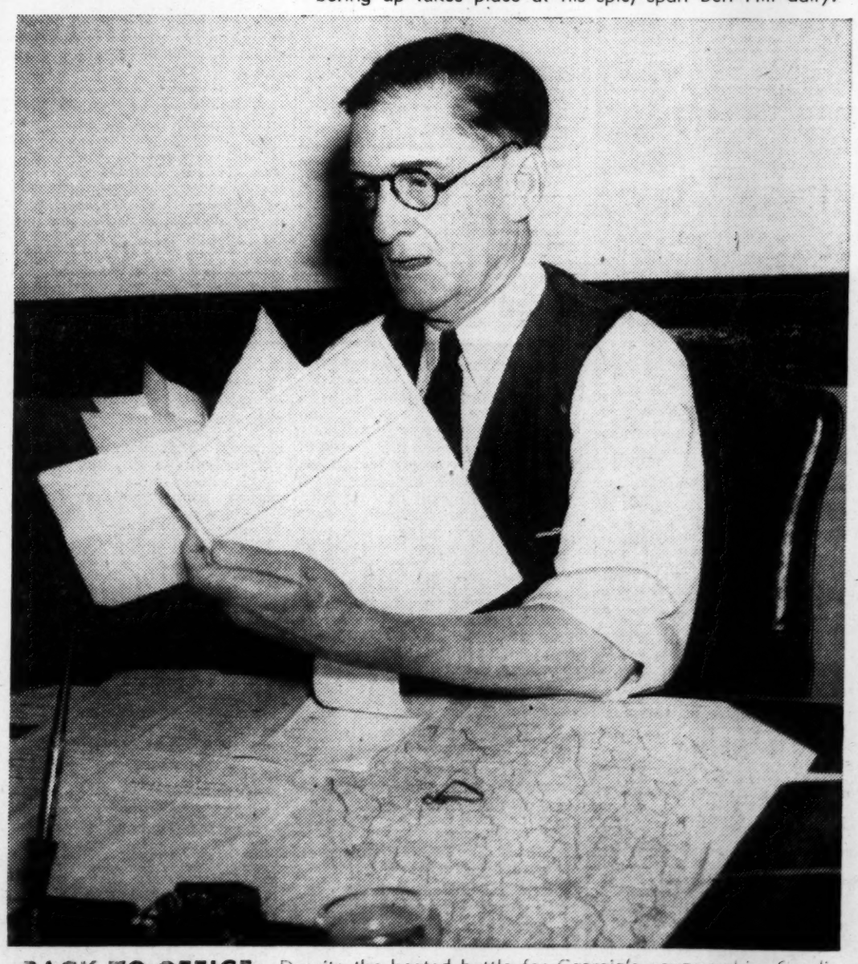
COWHAND That is, Candidate Columbus Roberts is an old hand with cows, being the successful farmer he is. He likes nothing better than to stroll over his pasture and watch progress of his herd.

CHAT WITH THE BOYS Agricultural problems are being threshed out by Candidate Roberts with a group of farmers at the State Farmers' Market. Sitting on the ground are crates of luscious Georgia-grown peaches. Commissioner Roberts has been particularly active in developing the Farmers' Market.



FRESH, SWEET is the milk that Candidate Roberts, bubbling over with pep and enthusiasm, pours from can to cooler. This bit of limbering up takes place at his spic, span Ben Hill dairy.

GEORGIA BOOSTER Candidate Roberts, who's fond of promoting Georgia products, takes time out in the middle of the day to sip a glass of Georgia-produced buttermilk, eat peanut butter crackers, and nibble a peach or two. Then he's ready to spend a hefty afternoon of work over pressing matters in the office.



BACK TO OFFICE Despite the heated battle for Georgia's governorship, Candidate Roberts has multiple duties to perform as commissioner of agriculture. Here he scans some of the many papers that stream through his office at the state capitol. His trips to the farm offer relaxation from the tension of the office.

Says People Respond To Crises Faster Than Representatives.

EMPORIA, Kan., Aug. 23.—Democracy is being constantly improved, and its latest accessory gadget is the Gallup poll of public opinion, which is cuter and handier than a windshield wiper, and serves somewhat the same purpose.

One of the things it shows is that the plain people are much smarter and are capable of thinking faster than you would sometimes guess from looking at the antics of their elected representatives.

Example: About five years ago, when the conservative Baldwin government of England was engaged in double-crossing the League and selling out the idea of collective security (with results which we now see), the Gallup poll in England showed that about 80 per cent of the British voters favored war, if necessary, to maintain England's commitments to aid the smaller nations of Europe.

These results completely staggered the Baldwin government, and momentarily threw it back on its haunches away from a policy of appeasement.

Favor Conscription.

A second example is that, shortly after the Nazi invasion of Flanders this spring, a clear majority in America for conscription here was registered by the Gallup poll long before any statesman had ventured to open his cautious trap on the subject, and also that, as of today, the people stand two to one in favor of immediate conscription.

It did not take the American people a week to digest the lesson of the Nazi break-through. Yet congress has just finished diddling and doodling around with a halfway measure which would empower the President to call up the guard for a year's training. And congress is still as suspicious of conscription as a kitten of a firecracker.

There are also heavy popular majorities for extending to England more aid than she is now receiving from us. By and large, the various criticisms of democracy, when they are broken down and analyzed, usually turn out to be not indictments of the basic common sense of the American people, but of the unworthy instruments and imperfect machinery through which the popular will is expressed.

No Majority.

In this connection it is important to remember that even in Germany, Hitler, until he seized power, never received a clear majority of the votes of the German people. He was given office, not by the votes of the German people, but by President von Hindenburg, because he headed the largest single party in the German state. But at no time in a free Germany could this party command more than 43 per cent of the total vote cast.

Once he had seized power, Hitler made a mockery of the electoral machinery, and also took complete control of all channels of information. But in spite of this, many observers who know the German people best will tell you that, if a secret, free election in Germany were possible, Hitler would not receive 20 per cent of the total vote, although some of the things he has done would be approved by heavy majorities.

The cure for the "evils" of democracy is usually more democracy, and the Gallup poll, in addition to giving many wobbly statesmen the courage to vote their convictions, sometimes shows us that the people are quicker to respond to a situation than the men they elect.

Skeletons Found In Augusta Mound

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 23.—(AP) Paul M. Myers, archaeologist, revealed today that two skeletons, pottery and other articles, which may prove important in piecing the prehistoric story of this part of the state, have been found on an Indian mound on Stallings Island.

The discovery was made by a WPA crew that has been excavating on the island in the Savannah river under Myers for the past month. The work is sponsored by the University of Georgia and the State Department of Natural Resources.

Myers said both skeletons were complete, one being that of a prehistoric man and the other of a woman of the same period. The Indian mound, described as being 450 feet long and 15 feet high, is expected to reveal several different "culture levels," Myers declared.

F. D. R. Jr. Helping Out In Re-election Campaign

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. has become a temporary volunteer worker for the re-election of his father, Democratic national headquarters disclosed today.

A law student, young Roosevelt next month is scheduled to take his bar examinations, and if he passes them has a job waiting for him in the law office of Eugene L. Garey, self-described "ardent anti-New Dealer."

Edward J. Flynn, national Democratic chairman, said young Roosevelt had been "interviewing young Democrats and college men and helping out generally."

Crackers Stage 9th-Inning Rally To Beat Vols in Slugfest, 15-13

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

Tough Luck NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 23.—Have you had your irony today? No? Well, just consider how some of the boys who have been fighting for the batting championship of the Southern league must feel.

Take Nashville's Oris (Muscles) Hockett. Looked like he might lead all of the boys to the wire.

For a time Emil Maildo was giving one and all a battle. In fact, it was thought that if any the boys let their foot slip, so to speak, Alf Anderson, who is consistency itself, might be a strong challenger.

But that was all changed when the Cincinnati Redlegs suddenly found they had no place for Mike Dejan, after paying Chattanooga $30,000 for the big slugger.

Mike only went to bat 16 times for the Reds. He didn't even appear in a full game. He had about as much chance to make the grade as a snowball would in a fiery furnace.

So the Reds sent Dejan to Birmingham. Naturally, the big fellow didn't have to start over from scratch in his batting.

And, since he left an average of .403 when he went to the big show, he returned and resumed his Southern league career at that point.

The efforts of all the others were wasted—except that it helped their respective teams greatly for them to be hitting at such a pace. That's something to consider.

They might even forget how unfair it is that Dejan probably will win the championship although he missed all those hot days of mid-July and August.

Paradoxically, the pitchers might have cooled him off during the hot stretch.

Such Fun! Umpiring is such fun! You can't beat them hours. Remember that near riot in the second game of last Sunday's duoble-header when Nashville's Culler was screaming for a ball after Glock had driven in the winning run?

Culler claimed the Crackers hadn't touched the bases and was figuring on making a Fred Merkle out of somebody.

The point of the story is not what happened last Sunday, however. It is simply mentioned because it was part of the fun an umpire gets out of the game.

Blackard was in the midst of the squabble and was none too unhappy when he left that night for Birmingham.

He had no idea when he ruled Glock's ball a ground rules double, which wasn't really a double because Glock failed to run down and touch second base, that he was going to run into another screwy situation at Birmingham.

There were runners on first and third when a drive hit into the bleachers—and bounced out. First runner scored. The runner who hit the ball raced like mad and passed the second runner.

Meanwhile, the ball was being fired back to the infield. The third baseman got it and slapped it on the man who had hit it. The man he had passed hit the dirt and scored.

You know what happened, of course? The man who hit the ball was automatically out for passing a runner. And when the ball was slapped on him, he was out twice! Two runs scored.

Life Is Real Rufus Hooks is 19. He has a reputation for being a left-handed thinking catcher. Rufus probably is associated with the oldest pitching staff in the league. Fellows like Stiles, Polli, Bass, et cetera, are getting along.

Anyway, R. Hooks was having a little trouble getting the pitchers to take his signs this day. He turned to an umpire who used to catch.

"Say," inquired young Hooks, "were the pitchers in your day this dumb?"

Seven Teams Are Eliminated From City Baseball Tourney

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Batters found the range in the second round of play yesterday in the Atlanta Amateur Baseball Federation's second annual tournament, and slugging bees weer the rule in contrast to the pitchers' battle of opening day. Seven teams (Smyrna, Tucker, Villa Rica Mills, Fickett-Brown, Marietta, Arrow Shirts and Canton) lost their second straight games and were eliminated, leaving nine outfits to carry on their battle for the city crown.

National Biscuit set the tourney record for hits in one game in their 19-to-5 rout of Smyrna as they raked three hurlers for 16 safe blows while Speedy Hollingsworth let Smyrna down with 5 knocks. A. L. Kendrick's five for six led the rout, with Quinn and Norton blasting out four, and Worth Tolar, Tip Moseley and Hollingsworth three each.

J. Martin twirled six-hit ball and Bryant led the hitters with four clouts as Roswell blasted Tucker, 14 to 1. Graham, with three safeties, and Childers and Rucker with two were next best. After Thursday's loss McDonough came back to trim Jackson, 9 to 6, with Spence pitching creditable seven-hit ball, and Hiram Cook pounding four hits. McGarity and W. Cook thumped two each and Capps' three for three was tops for Jackson.

Covington Mills counted eight runs in the last two frames to overcome Marietta, 10 to 9, in the most sensational tilt of the day. Payne's three for five was the best hitting effort for Covington and, and Clackun had the same record for the losers. Stumpy Duck Smith, Tech High footballer, hurled a five-hitter to trip Canton, 6-4, for Whittier Mills. Cook's three for four paced all batters.

Tanner pitched Oakland City's dark horse entry to an 8-to-3 win over Arrow Shirts with S. Peacock and T. Peacock slapping out two safeties apiece. Partain blasted three and Guy two out for the losers. Clarkdale made an easy conquest of Fickett Brown, With Coalson twirling a six-hitter they downed Lefty Edge, 7 to 1. Thackston thumped three safe ones and Harris, Wallace and Perry smacked two each.

Darby of Dallas, bested Matthews, of Villa Rica Mills, in the day's hurling battle, 3 to 2, with the losers outhitting Dallas 9 to 7. Villa Rica's Adkins had a perfect day with four straight hits. Baxter and Smith led Dallas with a pair each.

Four tough games are on tap for today with all tilts being played at Ponce de Leon park and Fulton Bag. Dallas drew a third-round bye.

North and South Grid Squads Will Drill Twice Daily.

By JOHN MARTIN.

Hugh Alford blurted off tackle on Frank Thomas' "51" twice before the gallery asked, "Who is that big guy with the ball?"

About the 15th time Alford had bored through the line in dummy signal practice it was apparent that the Southern All-Stars will face a fullback who can last as long as rawhide and who can dance with his 200 pounds as well as he could with feathers.

SPEEDY OUTFITS.

Alford is both the rule and the exception among the players who reported at Grant Field yesterday afternoon for the first drill for the All-Star prep game next Friday night.

As Coach Wally Butts explained it, "They're not so big, but you can't hit 'em till you reach 'em."

This was his way of admitting that the All-Stars, as a whole, packed speed to spare, despite new shoes and fresh blisters.

The big Hartwell boy, however, had both speed and size as he ran with the Northern team under Frank Thomas.

"He can move those feet, all right," observed Coach Bill Alexander, who handled the Southern All-Stars last season. He was watching from a prop against the goal post.

The Northern squad was two men short at the opening session, while the South worked with five of their number missing. Jim Dismuke, Lovick Corn, Herbert Lucas and Edwin Herndon were detained by drills in the National Guard. They will report Monday.

STROTHER ADDED.

Shortage of ends had Butts worried, and Coach Dwight Keith called Emmett Strother, rangy Richmond Academy star, to fill a gap caused by a last-minute withdrawal.

The squads went through a light but long warm-up, and today they open a two-a-day schedule. They will work mornings and afternoons until the eve of the game. Both Butts and Thomas will hold light scrimmages Monday.

Members of the basketball squad also reported to Coaches Elmer Lampe and Roy Mundorff, who is filling in for Adolph Rupp until the Kentucky coach arrives Sunday.

Registration of coaches for the third annual clinic will open Monday and classes will begin Tuesday.

Yates Fires Ace; Jones Has 68

Friday was only August 23 by the calendar, but out at East Lake Golf Club it was a red-letter day. Bobby Jones and Charlie Yates, Atlanta's outstanding golf names, and East Lake's most famous pair, were the cause of all the excitement.

Yates scored an ace at the sixth hole on the No. 1 course, and Bobby turned in a 68, which, after his remarkable round of 64 on Thursday, seems to indicate that the old master is getting back to consistency in the 60s.

The ace was Charlie's fifth. He used a 7-iron on the 158-yard hole. He was playing with A. A. Acklin, Jim Robinson Jr. and Bob Troutman.

Jones' foursome included Gene Dahlbender Jr., Dewey Bowen and Harold Sargent, assistant pro.

IT'S DONE LIKE THIS—Wallace Butts, coach of the Southern Prep All-Stars, was caught by the photographer yesterday as he demonstrated the art of blocking to a couple of his players. James Meadows, of Jordan High, left, and Ryals Lee, of Americus, are listening to Butts, who is demonstrating on Pete Page, also of Jordan.

Sure Sign of Fall

Butts Dresses in Reverse

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

There was a sure sign of fall out at the Georgia Athletic Coaches' Clinic yesterday.

After football practice, Wallace Butts, who is coaching the South Georgia All-Star team, which will meet Frank Thomas' northern eleven next Friday night, took his shower as usual.

He and his assistant, Earls Whitworth, were discussing their ends —or rather lack of ends. Only two showed up for the first drill.

Wally first put on his underwear wrong-side-outwards. Whitworth snickered a bit when Butts struggled out of his shorts and reversed them.

But when he put his polo shirt on in the same left-handed manner and had to reverse it, Whit could stand it no longer.

"You can tell his team is going to play a game next week," he laughed.

Bullet Bill Paschal, Tech High star last year, is working out with the Northern team and wants to play in the game. However, because he is already enrolled in Tech, the rules prohibit him from playing.

Tech coaches don't care if he plays. But there are several other boys in other schools who fall under the same rule and no exceptions can be made.

Adolph Rupp, who is to coach the Northern basketball squad, is still working at a clinic in Daytona Beach, Fla., and won't report until Sunday. In the meantime, Roy Mundorff, of Tech, is handling the Yankees.

First opinions may be wrong and very often are. But the ideas of the few coaches already here as to who will win the all-star game are very definite.

It is pretty generally conceded the Northern football and Southern basketball teams will emerge victorious. Thomas' eleven gets the edge because of more weight and experience in the line and more class in the backfield.

Fans are favoring Elmer Lampe's cage team for two reasons — Joe Murrow and Jim Homer.

Richards hurt his shoulder before he was ejected from the game by Umpire Kober. He retired in the next inning.

The shoulder will be X-rayed tomorrow morning. Should Richards be lost it will leave the Crackers with only Dewey Williams to catch.

Bill Warwick Plays Harper In Golf Finals

Home-Town Rivals Vie for First Valdosta Championship.

By AL SHARP.

VALDOSTA COUNTRY CLUB, VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 23.—Bill Warwick and Charlie Harper, both of Valdosta, advanced to the finals of the first annual invitation golf tournament here today. They will meet for the title at 36 holes tomorrow.

Warwick upset Johnny Oliver, the medalist, 1 up, in the morning and stopped Sonny Ellis, 15-year-old Columbus player, 4 and 3, in the afternoon.

WINS ON 18TH.

Harper defeated 17-year-old Harold Crow, of Atlanta, 2 and 1, and then turned back Max Oliver, of Valdosta, 1 up, at the 18th hole in the afternoon.

Harper's afternoon victory proved to be one of the most interesting of the tournament, Max Oliver staging a grand comeback after being 5 down with six holes to go.

Harper gained a 4-up lead through nine holes with a birdie barrage. Sinking four in five holes, starting at the second. He pushed that advantage to five through the 10th and then Oliver opened his rally.

With one birdie and the rest pars, Oliver drew within one hole of the 18-year-old Columbus player at the 17th hole. They capped the exciting match with birdie 3's at No. 18, Harper getting a nice downhill 6-footer into the cup after Max had sunk a longer uphill one.

BUDDY KING WINS.

In other morning matches, Ellis turned back Buddy Bowen, of Tifton, 5 and 4, and Max Oliver beat Jimmy Mason, of Thomasville, 2 and 1.

Buddy King, of Atlanta, reached the finals of the fourth flight consolation by default, while the other Atlantan—Paul King—lost in the second-flight consolation.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 23.—Knoxville's Smokies finally found a team they could beat, the cellar dwellers smacking out an 8-to-3 victory over the fast failing Chattanooga Lookouts.

The win was accomplished principally by the booming bat of Buck Ramsey, who homered twice and accounted for seven of the Smokies' tallies, although everyone but Pitcher Bob Carpenter got safeties.

That left the world champions just three games out of second place and only seven astern of the Indians, whose lead over second-place Detroit was cut to four games.

COMMERCIAL LEAGUE.

The Atlanta Commercial Baseball League will bring its 1940 season to a close Saturday with six of the eight league members clashing in double-headers. Post Office and Bob Hasty's Gas Company nine are the only teams scheduled for single games.

The league-leading Dixisteel club will entertain the Gordon Street Berean Class in a twin bill at Glenn field. A victory in either one of these engagements will clinch the league championship for the Steelmen. They won the first-half title with the loss of only one game and can duplicate that record for the last half by trimming the Bereans twice Saturday. Merita is in second place with five triumphs and three defeats. However, both Central and White Provision have a chance to slide into the runners-up position if Merita falters before Georgia Power at Mozley Park.

The most interesting contest on Saturday's program is expected to be the Post Office-Gas Company clash at S. W. Piedmont. Both teams have won three games and the winner in the season's final will move into fifth place in the standings.

Today's Schedule:

ATLANTA COMMERCIAL LEAGUE.

(Double-headers start at 2:30 o'clock, single game at 3:30 o'clock). Post Office v. Gas Company at S. W. Piedmont. Umpires, Sikes and Brown.

White Provision v. Central Cafe at Central. Umpires, Shi and Herron (double-header).

Georgia Power Company v. Merita at Mozley Park. Umpires, Patrick and Fowler (double-header).

Bereans v. Dixisteel at Glenn field. Umpires, Garner and Street (double-header).

GEORGIA LEAGUE.

Simmons Bed and General Shoe will open their three-game playoff for the Georgia League title this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Almand Park. James McWilliams is slated to hurl for Simmons Bed, while Walter Hearn, General Shoe's ace slabman, will oppose him.

LET'S GO TO THE GOLF TOURNAMENT SOMETIME.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 23.—Five hours ago I started for the Valdosta Country Club, where the first annual Invitation tournament is in progress. That was this morning.

It is midafternoon now, and I still am just as far away from the golf course as I was then.

But I have been having a big time trying to get there. Having a lot of things to do—rather. Having genial folks to take you around—provides a pleasant diversion.

It is a pleasant feeling to get a telephone call just before you start for a golf course and to arn from Horace Caldwell that you are not going to the tournament at that moment, but that you are going to the Kiwanis Club luncheon.

Then after luncheon it is nice to know that another Valdostan—Dave Wainer—is going to be kind enough to take you to a tobacco warehouse and then to a drying plant, so you can learn something about where cigarets come from.

Dave and I became fellow sympathizers at the dance last night after he made a remark about golf. Said he:

"I don't worry much about playing bad golf, because I can build good bridges and a lot of good golfers can't."

Which remark struck a responsive chord.

"The only trouble with that," I explained, "is that I can't build good bridges, either."

That left us all square at the nineteenth hole. So we decided to find out something about tobacco today. Incidentally, the tobacco is going to have to wait until the story about the bridge Dave is building can be told.

You can get places faster on that 668-foot span than you can on any other its size in the world, we believe.

The bridge, which is southwest of Valdosta, goes into two states and three counties. It is in Georgia and Madison county, Florida. . . . . .

Ride 668 feet over the Withlacoochee river and you've really been places.

When it was decided to build the bridge, the government ruled that the river was navigable and that brought on complications.

Congress had to pass an act to allow work to go ahead.

And now for the golf course.

This is being written in my hotel room, and the odds are heavy against getting past the lobby.

Some way there is hope the odds are right, because the detours have led to a lot of enjoyable hours.

ArgentineBody Will Not Allow Ortiz To Quit

Overwhelming Vote of Confidence for Leader Seen Today.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 23.—(AP) All factions in congress today decided to reject the resignation of ailing President Roberto M. Ortiz, easing a crisis over an army land purchase which threatened to split the country.

Rejection of the resignation and a vote of confidence for the President by 186 of the possible 190 votes in tomorrow's joint meeting of the chamber and senate were forecast tonight.

Liberals and conservatives, who have been bickering for more than 10 years, were in agreement on a major issue for the first time in a decade.

Victor Guillot, Radical (Liberal) party deputy accused of profiting in the land purchase, committed suicide today before what amounted to a united front to reject the President's resignation was shaped. Guillot, whose expulsion from the chamber had been asked by a congressional committee investigating the land deal, was found in his study with a bullet wound in his head. On his desk calendar, he had scribbled a note: "May God forgive me."

Political observers believed that the Ortiz offer to resign submitted last night, had served its purpose in rebuking officials who were implicated in the land transaction, and had won additional support for his attempt to pacify factions that have been at loggerheads for years.

Comedy Films Hold Spotlight During Week

Dialogue, Action Will Make Moviegoer Forget World Conditions.

By LEE ROGERS.
Motion Picture Editor.

Dialogue comedies and action comedies make for a merry film week in movies which opened here yesterday.

Best of the lot is the anti-Communist satire which Melvyn Douglas and Loretta Young are presenting as "He Stayed for Breakfast" at the Rialto. The other dialogue comedy, which is jammed with clever laugh lines, is "Lucky Partners," the premiere of which we attended during our recent stay in Hollywood. The concensus of this Hollywood premiere audience was that it was among the funniest films of the year.

Piracy, sailing before the mast and fighting on the high seas for the United States during the War of 1812 form a basis for the action film, "Captain Caution," which devotes much of its footage to Hal Roach tumbling comedy enacted by a strong cast. "Flowing Gold" is a story of rough and ready men who gamble their all on bringing in an oil well. It, too, is bulging with rowdy comedy. The Paramount plays it.

"Granny Get Your Gun" features May Robson in a western comedy at the Capitol.

MELVYN DOUGLAS STARS IN SATIRE ON COMMUNISM

Melvyn Douglas' publicity men have informed the public he made "He Stayed for Breakfast," a satire on Communism, to disprove all the claims made that he is a Red. With the aid of Loretta Young, Una O'Connor and Eugene Pallette, he definitely has succeeded in making "He Stayed for Breakfast" a fast moving, clever dialogue comedy which takes, easily, first place on the film menu this week.

Douglas is cast as a Red union organizer who shoots the little finger of a banker because he considered the tilting of the little finger while drinking coffee an affection of the rich. In his attempt to escape the police, he hides in the apartment of Banker Pallette's estranged wife. Loretta immediately becomes infatuated with him when he refuses to pay her court, befriends him, finds herself his prisoner overnight and that Melvyn has organized a one-woman servant strike in Una O'Connor, Loretta's maid.

Through humorous and often impossible situations, Loretta manages to convince Melvyn he's on the wrong side, but ends up taking a pot shot at her husband's little finger herself.

Melvyn is thrown out of the party because of his estranged wife and he leaves for the United States in a manner to please both Democrats and Republicans.

"I'm going to the U. S. and vote for Roosevelt," Melvyn says.

"But it takes five years to become a citizen," his friend counters.

"Oh, he'll still be running."

"LUCKY PARTNERS" HAS RICH COMEDY LINES

My first Hollywood premiere was "Lucky Partners" and despite being nearly knocked down by a burly guard who thought I was attempting to assassinate "The Dictator," one Charles Chaplin, as he almost ran over me trying to get into the theater unseen, I thought this first costarring film of Ginger Rogers and Ronald Colman a delightful comedy.

"Lucky Partners" opened yesterday at the Fox here. It's guaranteed to take your mind off the seriousness of the world outside the theater and, while it is not the best picture Ginger Rogers ever made, it does have a certain suaveness heretofore unnoticed in her films, that being due to the suave Mr. Colman, as polished an actor as the film world can offer.

Ginger would have looked a lot better if they hadn't made a brunet of her. Seeing her as such gives you a certain jarring note from which you never quite recover.

As said before, the comedy lines are rich and the situations compromising that arise when unmarried Ginger and Ronald take a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls. They had won on a sweepstakes ticket which they held jointly. When Ronald put up his half of the money for the ticket he made an agreement with Ginger that she would take a honeymoon trip with him if they won. They won and took the trip, but Ginger's fiance, Jack Carson, didn't like the setup. Harry Davenport straightens everybody out in a hilarious court scene.

"CAPTAIN CAUTION" HAS GREAT BRAWL SCENES

"Captain Caution," a Hal Roach adaptation of Kenneth Roberts' novel of the sea, is just what lovers of a brawl might have ordered. Plus, it has the old-time Roach comedy touch which adds laughs to even the roughest fight scenes.

Victor Mature, Roach's new "Greek Like a God" leading man, and Bruce Cabot engage in a fight to the finish that would thrill any action lover and it is done with realism.

The story concerns a hard-headed woman, Louise Platt, who determines to use her sail vessel to fight the British during the War of 1812. Her first mate, Mature, objects, but she has him arrested and puts her trust in Bruce Cabot, who unknown to her is a slave trader. Cabot plots to obtain the vessel and use it as a pirate ship.

Fights at sea and on shore are almost continuous. And with the combination of Roach comedy and Leo Carrillo, El Brendel and Vivienne Osborne, Roscoe Ates and Andrew Tombes in the cast gives a humorous relief from an over-abundance of sophisticated drawing room comedy.

ESTABLISHED STARS PLAY IN "FLOWING GOLD"

Pat O'Brien as a toughie again, John Garfield as a fugitive from justice again, Frances Farmer looking pretty again, and Raymond Walburn acting funny again combine established talents to make a rough action picture of the men who drill for oil in hopes of making an overnight fortune.

"Flowing Gold" is primarily an action film about men of action and the women who love them. Secondly, it has a cast that knows the benefit to audience appeal of a good laugh.

There is money's worth of both in this Paramount attraction which sees Garfield reforming and getting the girl as O'Brien steps aside after the oil well blows in, just in time to save the lease. There is a good shot of an oil well fire.

Italy To Invade If British Take Greek Islands

Greece Calls Up More Soldiers; Britain Reaffirms Guarantee.

ROME, Aug. 23.—(AP)—An Italian invasion of Greece will follow any effort by the British to occupy the strategic Greek islands, a high Fascist source declared in plain words today.

"Italy is not going to let the British occupy any Greek islands," he said, discussing rumors that Britain was thinking of moving into the islands of Crete and Corfu.

"If the British move into Greece, we will do the same."

In Athens, the Greek government called up four more categories of army "specialists."

The press in Italian-conquered Albania took up, meanwhile, the cry against Greece—who has a guarantee of support from Britain if her independence is attacked. This guarantee was reaffirmed today in London.

In the war already at hand, the Italian high command reported that an English submarine had been sunk by a torpedo boat; that the British Egyptian base in Alexandria had been successfully bombed, and that Italian planes had bombarded a British Mediterranean convoy protected by two destroyers.

Man Who Buys Gift for Wife Gets Protection

Court Orders New Trial in Case Against Atlantan.

A three-judge tribunal of the civil court of Fulton county ruled yesterday that ·y married man who dares to purchase a gift for his wife without allowing her personally to select the present deserves to have all the protection the law can give him.

This decision was reached by Judges Ralph McClelland, Clarence Bell and T. O. Hathcock in the case of an Atlanta jewelry company against W. C. Dunbar.

Dunbar, it was said, wanted to give his wife a ring and took it home for her to see after signing a title retention contract with the understanding, he said, that he could return the ring if his wife didn't like it. She didn't.

But when he went to return it, the company would not accept the ring and won a directed verdict in civil court recently ordering Dunbar to pay for the ring. He appealed to the three-judge tribunal and won a new trial.

DUTCH TANKER TORPEDOED.

LISBON, August 23.—(AP)—The Dutch tanker Hermes, which left Lisbon on Wednesday, returned tonight badly damaged in the prow and reported she had been torpedoed 250 miles off Lisbon. One sailor was injured.

LABOR LEADER—Mrs. Dorothy Bellanca, long-time vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, installed officers of the Atlanta local union, No. 365, here last night. The installation service marked the first anniversary of the union here.

Union Workers Out on Strike At Paper Firm

Labor, Company Representatives Will Confer This Morning.

Union workers at the Atlanta Paper Company went on strike yesterday and established a picket line around the plant at Hunter and Moore streets.

Robert L. Simmons, representative of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, last night said that "almost the entire mechanical force of the Atlanta Paper Company plant believes that there have been repeated violations of the contract entered into last year between the union and the company."

Will Confer.

The union representatives are scheduled to confer with company representatives at 9 o'clock this morning at room 329 Hurt building, Simmons said.

Arthur I. Harris, president of the company, in a paid advertisement stated that the company had not been informed of any grievance or dispute and laid the blame for the strike on the international union official.

Harris said the differences arose over the collection of union dues.

The paper company's advertisement stated the contract between the company and the union provided employes would not strike or stop work and added it was the belief of the company that union members had not been informed of the contract provision by their bargaining agency.

An attorney for the paper company would not elaborate on the statement in the advertisement. Harris said the advertisement fully stated the company's case and that he had nothing to add.

Police on Duty.

More than a dozen policemen were on duty around the plant, and it was reported several fist fights developed near the scene. Simmons warned strikers not to harm company property.

The international representative denied the company's charges he called the strike because he could not collect union dues and asserted that a "spontaneous condition" caused the strike. He said all dues were collected by the local union's officers.

Workers' Aim.

The union workers today will ask for a "preferential" shop, Simmons indicated. This would allow any paper company employes not now members of the union to continue work without joining but would require new employes to become union members, it was explained.

Union representatives claimed most of the company employes were out on strike, and the company asserted only that "a number" of employes had not shown up for work yesterday morning.

Simmons said late yesterday afternoon he had not been able to get in touch with his superiors in the international to authorize the paper company strike but expected to do so last night.

DeKalb Police Exonerated in Accident Case

DeKalb Commissioner Scott Candler yesterday exonerated four county policemen charged with negligence in the handling of an accident near Stone Mountain last Saturday and ordered all officers "to take a recognized course in first aid training at once."

His decision followed a public hearing last Tuesday at which time several witnesses to the crash complained that police failed to remove injured persons immediately and used harsh language in restraining passers-by from aiding the wounded.

Candler defended the officers, stating they had "employed well recognized rules of first aid in not permitting the indiscriminate moving of the injured." He added that Captain Ed Foster, according to the evidence, had the wounded hospitalized as soon as possible.

Unions' Tasks Described by High Official

Must Keep Industry Healthy, Stabilized, She Says Here.

Labor unions are not one-sided affairs. They have more jobs to do than just organize workers, and one of them is to keep industry healthy and stabilized, for unless "industry is healthy, labor will suffer."

These ideas were expressed here last night by Mrs. Dorothy Bellanca, long-time vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, one of the nation's most powerful unions, with a membership of over 260,000, in 32 states.

And she points with pride to the work which her union has done to stabilize the clothing industry.

"We have not had a major labor disturbance since 1921, and the union is the most active in the United States in promoting stabilization of its industry," she said. "The union has even gone so far as to loan money to employers to keep them in business and the whole industry has benefited from the research which our experts have made."

Mrs. Bellanca was in Atlanta to address and install the officers of the Atlanta Local No. 365 on its first anniversary. She has been a member of the union since 1914 when she was a child laborer in a Baltimore clothing plant. She became vice president in 1916 and has held the position since. Sidney Hillman, vice president of the CIO, is president.

Officers installed included: Leora Barfield, president; Leon Dean, Fairy Hatfield and Nellie Parker, vice presidents; Kathryn Fortner, recording secretary; Inez Davis, financial secretary; Elmo Bell, treasurer; Sue Austin, Salena Hilliard and Hazel Bankston, trustees.

Rivers Urges Georgians' Aid In Listing Aliens

Governor Proclaims August 30 'Americanism Day in Georgia.'

Governor Rivers yesterday called upon Georgians to co-operate with federal officials in registering aliens during the period from August 27 to December 26.

In a proclamation, the chief executive pointed out that under an act of congress all aliens 14 years of age or over are required to register and all alien children under 14 years must be registered by their parents or guardians.

He especially urged that civic, fraternal and patriotic organizations aid the federal government. The aliens will register at the post office.

The Governor also issued a proclamation setting aside Friday, August 30, as "Americanism Day in Georgia." On that date Congressman Martin Dies, of Texas, will speak in Atlanta under sponsorship of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and other organizations.

NOTICE TO ALL EMPLOYEES OF ATLANTA PAPER COMPANY:

A number of employees of the Atlanta Paper Company have failed to report to their jobs this morning, Friday, August 23, 1940.

The Committee representing the Local Unions of the International Printing Pressmen & Assistants' Union of North America have advised the Management that employees of the Union were going on strike today and consequently the Management assumes that this is the reason for failure of SOME EMPLOYEES to report for work.

The Management does not know which of its employees have voluntarily gone on strike and which of its employees have been prevented, forcibly or otherwise, from returning to their work.

The purpose of this notice, therefore, is to advise the employees of the Company as follows:

1. The Atlanta Paper Company has a contract with the Local Unions 394 and 395 and the International Printing Pressmen & Assistants' Union of North America, UNDER WHICH THERE IS A DEFINITE GUARANTEE TO THE ATLANTA PAPER COMPANY THAT EMPLOYEES WILL NOT STRIKE OR STOP WORK, AND THIS CONTRACT PROVIDES THAT IN THE EVENT OF ANY WALK-OUT, STRIKE, DELAY, OR STOPPAGE OF WORK, SUCH ACTION ON THE PART OF AN EMPLOYEE OR EMPLOYEES IS SUFFICIENT CAUSE FOR DISMISSAL OF SUCH EMPLOYEE BY THE ATLANTA PAPER COMPANY.

2. It is the belief of the Management of the Atlanta Paper Company that the individual employees in this Company have not been informed of the contract which has been made for them through their bargaining agency, acting on behalf of the International Printing Pressmen & Assistants' Union of North America.

3. It is the belief of the Atlanta Paper Company that the employees do not know and have not been informed that under the terms of the contract any grievance or dispute which they may have must be arbitrated, if it can not be settled by the Committee.

4. The Management is not informed of any grievance or dispute and no request for arbitration has been made. The only possible reason for a strike is the inability of the union to collect dues for the International Printing Pressmen & Assistants' Union of North America. The Union advises that, if the Atlanta Paper Company will agree to collect the Union dues for it, then everything will be happy at the Atlanta Paper Company.

5. The Management feels that the inability of the Union to collect dues is a matter in which only Union members are concerned and that this should not prevent employees who wish to work from continuing their employment.

6. Consequently, the Management wishes to give an opportunity to those employees who wish to do so to return to their jobs. Employees who have for any reason stopped their work today will have until 12 o'clock noon Saturday, August 24, in which to report concerning their work. The plant will operate Saturday.

7. Employees who have not returned to work by that time will, pursuant to the terms of the contract between this Company and the Unions dated September 5, 1939, be discharged and their employment with the Atlanta Paper Company terminated.

8. The Management wishes to assure men who have remained at their jobs that their jobs are secure and that no interference with these men or their work will be tolerated.

9. Finally, the Management wishes to advise its employees that the Atlanta Paper Company will continue to operate.

Yours very truly,

ATLANTA PAPER COMPANY

Ten Club Meets At Glenridge For Book Review

A delightful affair of yesterday was the meeting or the Ten Club, comprised of prominent members of Atlanta's masculine contingent, which was held at Glennridge, home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn at Dunwoody.

Although the meetings of the organization usually assemble only gentlemen, a special affair was made of last evening with wives of members the invited guests.

A feature of the meeting was the reviewing of "Who Killed Aunt Maggie," by the host. The book, written by Medora Field Perkerson, has received wide acclaim throughout the south.

Mrs. John Marsh, author of "Gone With the Wind," and Mr. Marsh were special guests as were Mrs. Perkerson and Mr. Perkerson.

Colorful flowers beautified the home, and a buffet supper was served on the terrace, which affords an inspiring view of the Blue Ridge mountains in the distance.

Do You Look the Picture Of Feminine Daintiness?

By Lillian Mae.

Quite a compliment, indeed, during the sweltering days and nights in which we are now enmeshed, to be told you look the picture of feminine daintiness. For in summertime a crisp-as-lettuce-leaf look is better than beauty. Without it, a lovely face and figure will fail to charm, for daintiness is the first rule of summer beauty.

But use what hot-weather foils you may, you'll not be dainty more than a few hours at best, unless you use a deodorant, for the air around you is bound to breathe the odor that emanates from your person—whether it be a frangrance pleasing, or otherwise.

It checks perspiration in a healthful way, banishes perspiration odors and is harmless to clothes, because it vanishes from the surface of your skin very quickly, leaving the skin soft and fragrant.

Now a tip! Use this carnation-scented cream not only under your arms, but under the soles of your feet, in the crook of your arm and smooth it thinly in the palms of your hands.

You can't use it too often. For some people every three days is sufficient, but I'd rather be safe than offensive, so it follows my bath whether once or three times a day. For after all, it isn't expensive, particularly during these hot days and nights, when the price has been cut in half. It's a wonderful beauty investment.

Phone me for the name of this carnation-scented deodorant while the price is reduced. Write me if you do not live in Atlanta, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Irish Maureen O'Hara, RKO Radio actress, is a picture of feminine daintiness in her Russian peasant frock of unbleached muslin, in chartreuse and forest green—an informal, loafing gown for in-between pictures. To insure personal daintiness, necessary regardless of your clothes, during the sweltering days, she uses an effective deodorant.

Hollywood Parades Autumn Styles

By Sheilah Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—It may seem too hot right now to think of fall suits and furs, but Hollywood has to be several months in advance of the fashion vanguard. Virginia Field, now toiling in R.-K.-O.'s "Dance, Girl, Dance," has purchased a tailored outfit in Oxford gray wool with a corded pin-stripe in white. The curved revers of the collarless jacket are piped with white pique. Her large beret is of the suit fabric. The attractive flower pin is in gold and diamonds. To top off the suit, Virginia carries an expensive-looking silver fox muff.

Ida Lupino looked very pretty the other evening in her new pale satin dinner gown with long, tight sleeves, normal waistline crushed with a wide belt of blue felt encrusted with gold beads, braid and small pearls. The low square neckline with an attached hood bordered with the same lavish embroidery.

Corduroy and duvetyn will be this fall's most popular fabrics for schoolgirl wear . . . brown will be the season's outstanding color . . . and red will continue to be a strong favorite—this is the prediction of California's designers, who recently previewed their new fall product at the Los Angeles fall fashion openings.

Here are some of the outstanding ensembles. . . . A three-piece suit in which cocoa-brown and a soft shade of cadet blue are combined. The slightly flaring skirt in a brown monotone. The tailored jacket of imported tweed has the brown and blue in a medium-sized check. The swagger topcoat has the two shades again, this time in a giant-sized check. . . . A slack suit of slate blue wool gabardine, with a tunic-length jacket. The jacket is cut on generous lines so that when it is snugly belted, there is fullness flaring out beneath the waistline. The suit is accentuated by four big patch-pockets, trimmed with gold buttons. . . . A toast-brown wool jersey shirt-waist frock with the entire back made of bright scarlet suede. The collar, too, is of scarlett suede.

And a youthful two-piece dress of duvetyn, with a wind-breaker jacket of bright peacock blue; the skirt of cerise, with diagonal stripes of blue. The hight waistband to the skirt is shirred, as are the cuffs. . . . Also a black crepe afternoon dress featuring the side draping which is destined for great popularity this fall. The draping is accented with a scroll of jet beads at the waistline, and a similar jet scroll at the neckline.

Olivia de Havilland goes in for trick hats. How would you like this one, which has a little white suede brim and black felt short postillion crown carrying two white suede feathers? This chic headpiece goes with Olivia's gray broadcloth suit with white pin-stripes.

Bette Davis says that shoes are the mainstay of every costume and they'd better be good because people look at a girl's feet first. Her pet aversion are white summer shoes that are gray—if you know what she means. Bette advices, "Buy four or five pairs of white shoes, (if you can afford it) each summer so they will always look fresh and clean." In "The Letter," with all clothes suitable for a tropical locale, Bette wears a pair of white linen pumps embroidered with blue and pink forget-me-nots over the toes. Her frock is a white linen one-piece with blue suede belt.

Ann Sheridan is a costume jewelry fanatic, but wears it sparingly. Ann believes that one good piece on a costume is more important if it plays a single role. Her favorite costume piece at this writing is an inch-wide, gold mesh bracelet with topazes. The bracelet shows a knotted effect with delicate strands of mesh ending in simulated topaz.

MY DAY: In Defense Of Feminine Women

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, Thursday.—Yesterday was a quiet day and we were happy to see Franklin Jr. for a little while. He celebrated his birthday last week with his wife and little boy in Northeast Harbor, Maine, on his return from his reserve officers' cruise. Now he has come back and is doing some work in New York City.

The President left in the evening to go back to Washington. I think this has been one of the quietest and most restful visits he has had this summer. One can never, of course, feel entirely free from the shadow of world events, but in the country there is always something healing in the mere fact that nature does rebuild whatever she destroys.

I have received a copy of the September issue of Harper's magazine, with an article, "The Inner Threat, Our Own Softness," by Roy Helton, marked for me to read. He seems to feel that the democracies have suffered from the influence of feminism and all of our softnesses have come from the fact that men have increased the luxuries of life just because they have been trying to please the ladies and cater to feminine desires.

I do not really think that this is true, for the world seems to be run for men and by men even now. Here and there you find a spoiled woman, but I think she is always matched by a spoiled man. The average woman keeps active and working as long as the average man. She may be more interested in her looks, or the nature of her work makes it more possible for her to continue to perform her daily tasks. Nevertheless, she does function frequently up to a ripe old age.

I agree with much that Mr. Helton says. My only contention is that the gentlemen are quite as much to blame as the ladies. If children are spoiled, it is just as apt to be the father's fault as the mother's. If we do not want to face paying taxes, I haven't noticed that the gentlemen clamor to do so any more than the ladies. There is a sufficient majority of gentlemen still in congress to make us do it if they feel strongly about it.

We should not miss one paragraph in this article: "For be sure of this, in a world of power the gracious, the genteel, the sheltered life has of itself no force. It has no vital consequences. Couple democracy to those ideals and you marry it to death. Whatever survives between now and the year 2000 will be something tough."

I agree with you, Mr. Helton, it will be tough, but one can be tough and at the same time gentle and gracious and cultured. Some of the toughest people I know are both gentle and gracious. There is steel sometimes hidden under a velvet softness and I have known women who were tougher than men when it came to standing up under hardships and showing endurance.

"A little learning is a dangerous thing" . . . to which maxim the philandering husband nods his head and says, "Could be."

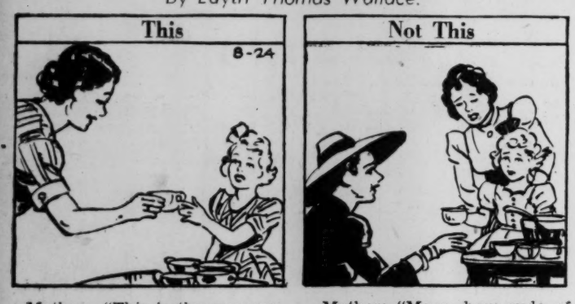
POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.



Mother: "This is the way we pass a cup to someone else. See, we turn the handle so the other person can take it easily. Now you try passing it to me."

Mother: "Mary, how rude of you! Don't you know how I told you to pass a cup? You'll have to excuse her, Mrs. Smith. She really knows better."

Calcium Content in Milk And Cheese Quiet Nerves

By Dr. William Brady.

Calcium increases the force of the heart beat and tends to dilate the coronary arteries or oppose spasm or contraction of the coronary arteries, and is therefore beneficial in many cases of heart disease, especially when the individual has calcium shortage which most Americans have as a result of refined diet, insufficient consumption of milk and cheese, insufficient intake of vitamin D or insufficient exposure of naked skin to direct sunlight.

Calcium regulates excitability of nerve fibres and nerve centers, diminishes irritability when, as a result of the same deficiencies already mentioned, the nerves are irritable. And Dr. Brady says that in his opinion a famous nostrum of by-gone days got fulsome testimonials from such gullible customers as lawyers, college professors, clergymen, etc., because the nostrum contained a good deal of calcium (it was virtually glorified cottage cheese) and cheese was very good food for the customers. The author also points out that the Weir Mitchell rest cure for "neurasthenia" in the eighties and nineties featured milk diet—the customers had to take milk and like it. Milk, like cheese, is an excellent source of calcium.

While the period of growth and development, childhood and adolescence, is the time of greatest need of calcium, and this is the time when most young persons get insufficient calcium for optional nutrition, nutrition authorities and well informed physicians know now that the calcium requirement increases materially in the expectant and nursing mother. If this increased requirement is not met by an increased daily intake of calcium and vitamin D the requirement of the developing fetus and nursing infant will be satisfied anyway by robbing the mother's bones and teeth of calcium. For her own sake as well as the health and development of her baby, therefore, the expectant or nursing mother who is well advised will take an extra ration of calcium and vitamin D throughout pregnancy and lactation.

Since most foods rich in calcium are also rich in phosphorous—notably milk, egg yolk, beans, cheese, peas, peanuts, almonds, cabbage—one need not worry about the calcium-phosphorous ratio in the system unless the diet is exceptionally restricted, and then the matter is one for the physician to consider. Plain wheat, wheat bran, wheat germ are all rich in phosphorous; so is lean meat, which is poor in calcium, however.

To the best of present knowledge, it is immaterial whether part or all of the calcium intake is derived from calcium in foods or from calcium taken as medicine. Of the numerous calcium compounds in medicinal form calcium gluconate and di-calcium phosphate appear to be the most suitable forms for supplementing the diet of child or adult. Whenever calcium is taken in medicinal form it is important to take along with it a sufficient amount of vitamin D to insure assimilation and metabolism of the calcium in the body. Without vitamin D very little calcium can be assimilated and metabolized; with it at least half of the daily intake of calcium (in food or medicine) may be used.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Iodine.

Would like to know if taking iodine in summer is harmful and also if sinus trouble affects the throat. (Mrs. H. M.)

Answer—You do not mention how much iodine you take for what condition. Sinus trouble may account for throat symptoms. Any one may safely take the Iodin Ration in summer. For Instructions for Taking the Iodin Ration send a stamped envelope bearing your address.

Headache.

Can you recommend any safe remedy to keep on hand to relieve headache? (F. S.)

Answer—No. But I give the best advice I can in the 10-page pamphlet "Why Have Headache?"—for copy send stamped envelope bearing your address.

Discontent Leads You to the Icebox

By Ida Jean Kain

What do you do when you are bored . . . buy a hat, rearrange the furniture, or eat? Millinery is a safety valve for man a woman. When life is drab, she brightens it up with a new bonnet. Some blues shoppers buy extravagantly one day and send half their purchases back the next!

But perhaps you have a strong domestic streak and give yourself a lift by changing the living room around. This is something the head of the house never understands—particularly if you try to enlist his co-operation!

Or perhaps you get out and walk furiously. The physiological fatigue seems to be a very effective antidote to psychological stress and you come back worn out but with peace of mind.

The majority of women, however, take their dissatisfaction out in less energetic measures. Some of them go to the movies and lose themselves in a double feature. But if the facts were known, probably the big percentage turn to eating. What else could impel a woman to sit down and eat her way through a box of chocolates!

It's hard to see the connection between food revelry and a broken romance . . . but the psychologists claim that the overweight girl who constantly indulges in sweets is very likely trying to assuage some nagging unhappiness. As an actual case in point, we know a divorcee who, in her depression, turned to overeating to such an extent that diabetes developed. And we know a man who has a good job but not in the type of work he loves. He is so discontented that within two hours after a hearty meal he is at the icebox looking for more to eat!

At the obesity clinics, dissatisfaction is found in the predominant cause of overweight. This is almost invariably true of the women whose budgets do not allow for many new hats or clothes or entertainment.

If you eat because you are bored, it is better to face the fact and to recognize the harm you are doing yourself. Then make a determined effort to substitute other and more absorbing interests. When your work is finished, get out—walk, window shop, join a club, visit your friends, do anything that will break your routine.

The exercises in the leaflet, "Streamline the Midsection," get results so quickly that your spirits get a lift! Write today for the exercises. Please enclose stamped return envelope to Ida Jean Kain, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Wedding Cake Has Proxy.

With a piece of wedding cake inside it, a box mailed at Taunton, England, collapsed and the cake was lost. The woman to whom it was addressed received the damaged box with another sample of cake inside. A note on official paper said: "Box discovered empty, but thought you would not like to be disappointed. Imagination goes a long way.

By Lillian Mae.

It's just as easy as not to be well dressed at home—and here's proof in this attractive cotton dress, Pattern 4523. As you can see by the open diagram, Lillian Mae has planned the style in just four main pattern parts. The paneled front has a magically slenderizing effect; the back is darted-in at its seamless waistline. Why not finish off the short sleeve style with neat bands, perhaps in contrast, with pockets to match? Keep the Sewing Instructor close on hand and make this frock in record time.

Pattern 4523 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 4 1-8 yards 35-inch fabric and 2 1-8 yards ric-rac.

Woman's Quiz

Q. My baby is constantly gritting his teeth in his sleep. Is this a sign of worms?

A. Restlessness and gritting the teeth are often signs that a child has gone to bed too tired. Enlarged adenoids, improper food for supper, too many or too few bedclothes, too hot a room or uncomfortable night clothes may be the cause.

Q. Please give a recipe for baked beans.

A. To 4 cups of cooked beans, add 1 cup of maple syrup, 1-2 cup chili sauce or tomato catsup, few grains of pepper and 1 teaspoon of salt. Put this mixture into a baking dish and place 1-4 pound of salt pork in the center and cover the beans with water. Bake slowly from three to four hours.

Q. How may I wash feather pillows?

A. A washing machine is recommended. The water should be moderately hot and should contain enough mild soap, either in flake or in jelly form, to make a thick suds which will not go down during washing. About 15 or 20 minutes should be spent in the actual washing, depending on how soiled the articles are. Ordinary sized pillows must be put into the washing machine singly. Two or three rinses in clear water of the same temperature as that used for washing are necessary. It is important to keep the water at the same moderate temperature so as not to take the natural oil out of the feathers. While the pillows are drying, they should be shaken frequently and turned over to make them fluffy and to redistribute the filling.

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, sign your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp and mail to the Woman's Editor of The Constitution's Washington Service Bureau, 1013 13th street, Washington, D. C., for a reply. Don't telephone; write as directed.

Mrs. Nelson Celebrates Her Eightieth Birthday

Mrs. Jennie Nelson recently received the congratulations and good wishes of her family on the occasion of her 80th birthday at a gathering held at the home of her niece, Mrs. Fan Ungar Feldman, at 873 Vedado Way, N. E. Many messages were sent from friends and relatives in distant cities.

Due to the philosophy of "Aunt Jennie," as she is popularly known to many who hold no actual relationship, that "life begins at eighty," games were planned that would have taxed the resources of many half her age. As a special tribute, a sonnet was dedicated to Mrs. Nelson by her nephew, David Edward Ungar.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Albert Roth, Marvin Roth, Mrs. Mae Winkler, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Lease, of Rome; Mr. and Mrs. I. Kuniansky, Dr. and Mrs. J. Legion Drafts Parade Plans For Convention

Five Bands, Many Unusual Floats Assured for Boston.

Georgia Legionnaires, who have won the coveted right to lead the parade during the national American Legion convention in Boston September 24, are determined to make the convention definitely Georgia-conscious, Ralph P. Black, parade committee chairman, said here yesterday.

Plans which took shape this week indicated the Georgia delegation will have no fewer than five band formations, and some of the most unusual floats ever to be presented in Legion marches.

Tentative arrangements have been set in motion, Mr. Black said, to have the drum and bugle corps of Atlanta Post No. 1, Thomasville's prize-winning band, LaGrange's state championship drum and bugle corps, Georgia's all-girl military band, and Atlanta's police band in the procession. The girls' band, it was said, will march in human flag formation.

The producers of "Gone With the Wind" have been asked, Mr. Black said, to enter a float, and a movement is on foot to have Vivien Leigh, the G. W. T. W. Scarlett O'Hara, ride on it, if possible.

Other floats will represent Berry Schools and College, the Georgia peach and pecan industries, the Ocmulgee Indian mounds, and the Poppy Day movement originated by Miss Moina Michael, of Athens. Another float, probably in the design of the first steamship, will be sponsored by the Savannah post.

Talmadge Cites 'Similarity' of All Platforms

Roberts Outlines Plan for Expanded Farm Market System.

By LUKE GREENE.

While observers predicted there might be forthcoming a sudden burst of steam in the gubernatorial campaign as the candidates go into the final stretch, Eugene Talmadge yesterday expressed the hope none of his opponents would withdraw, Columbus Roberts continued to talk about helping the farmers, Abit Nix took pot shots at Talmadge and Hugh Howell remained silent.

In a radio talk Talmadge said, "There is talk of huge sums of money being offered each other among my opponents to get them to withdraw from the race. I hope that none of my opponents would sell out his supporters and himself."

Talmadge admitted that "all of us have practically the same platforms," and added: "The thing for the voters of Georgia to consider is which one of us is better qualified and most likely to carry out his promises."

Talks at Fayetteville.

Earlier in the day Talmadge spoke to a crowd at Fayetteville. The Fulton county "Talmadge-for-Governor Club" formed a motorcade to the meeting, which included a barbecue given by Fayette county supporters.

He asserted that some of his opposition were eliminating hard times in Georgia temporarily by "turning loose a huge campaign slush fund in a desperate effort to force a run-over primary."

He advised his friends to "get the money they are turning loose," but warned them to vote their own convictions.

Talmadge said he had never offered any candidate opposing him any "inducement to withdraw from a race, and never will."

At Madison, Roberts outlined his plan for an expanded farmers' market system and his proposal to reduce the prices of dairy products.

Opposes Milk Tax.

If he is elected he said the tax on sale of fresh milk would be removed as an initial step toward stimulating Georgia town and farm prosperity.

"Milk can be the most profitable of all 'farm crops,' but it requires a broad and ever-broadening market to absorb all our farmers need to produce," Roberts said. "To arbitrarily cut this market by making it harder for people to buy milk, taxing merchants to discourage them from selling it, is about as stupid a piece of business as is being done now in Georgia.

Speaking at Gainesville, Nix said "Georgia Democrats once more will defeat Talmadge, the state's chief champion of Republicanism."

He referred to the fact that Talmadge will speak at a rally in Grant Park next Wednesday and declared it was "the first time in Georgia history a candidate has had to go to the cyclorama to get a crowd."

Nix said the meeting was scheduled on a day "when people flock to the zoo to see the animals," and remarked that "he's offering the sightseers watermelon so's to get them to stop looking at the zoo long enough for him to get a picture and claim it's his crowd."

They will make way for the new trackless trolleys.

Between 5:30 o'clock when the street cars begin coming off the line, and about 9:30 o'clock, when the trackless trolleys go into service with a free ride for everybody until midnight, the transportation from town out West Peachtree to Buckhead will be handled by gasoline buses, operating over the trackless trolley route.

The official opening of the trackless trolley line is under the auspices of the Buckhead Fifty Club, with Judge Clarence Bell as master of ceremonies, and Mose George, secretary of the club, in charge of all arrangements. The program will be held in Buckhead, the speakers' stand being located at the corner of East Pace's Ferry road and Bolling way.

Peter Manning, pastor of the Inman Park Methodist church. Talks will be made by Mayor Hartsfield; Scott Candler, DeKalb county commissioner; Walter McDonald, chairman of the Georgia Public Service Commission; Ed Almand, chairman of the Fulton county commission; George Hamilton, representing the Fifty Club, and P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company.

After the speaking, six-year-old Helen Thompson, daughter of J. Schley Thompson, chairman of the program committee of the Fifty Club, will cut a ribbon releasing the new vehicles and the first official trip to Atlanta will be made by the speakers, officers of the Fifty Club and special guests. The officers of the club are: W. A. Brand, president; Samuel D. Hewlitt, vice president; Mose George, secretary, and J. W. Picklesimer, treasurer.

After the first official trip, the 28 trackless trolleys which will provide the service to Buckhead and Oglethorpe will operate up and down the line from town to the end of the line, with everybody invited to get aboard and take a free ride.

Preceding the ceremonies at Buckhead the Fifty Club will entertain city and county officials and North Side civic and business leaders at a barbecue at Lakemoore, on Roswell road. For the convenience of the guests, the power company will operate buses from Buckhead to Lakemoore at 10-minute intervals Saturday from 4:30 to 7:30 p. m.

LUCKY FOR LOVE

Al Plots To Get Marilyn Into Clara's Barred Apartment

By JANE DIXON.

SYNOPSIS.

That Clara Marsh, very conscious of her blond good looks and good figure, has been voted the winner of a six-county beauty contest is announced in Millville's Bijou Theater by Al Martino, sleek-haired representative of the Metropole Amusement Corporation of New York. The prize is a 10-day trip to New York. That evening Clara's younger sister Marilyn is notified she won the $1,000 prize for the best last line in the Clarco Super Soap Flakes Jingle Jubilee contest and Clara accuses her of trying to detract from her beauty contest honors. Marilyn celebrates by lunching the next day at the Silver Grill with Sally Meacham with whom she works in the Bon Ton Store, and Martino, there with Clara, asks who the two pretty girls are. Marilyn, trying to patch up a truce with Clara later, tells her how nice it is that her mother can see New York with her, but Clara says she is taking the $100 allowed for the chaperon's expenses for herself. Al is plainly infatuated with Marilyn and calls at the run-down Marsh house which she is planning to fix up. Finally, she tells him he will make trouble for her if he doesn't stop his attentions. Back in New York, Al tells Palmer Watson, Metropole president, he is having trouble keeping Clara in hand as she drinks too much, and Mrs. Marsh gets a letter from her asking for money. While Al is on his way to the Blue Parrot night club to try to locate Clara, she is drinking champagne there with Herman Hess, who says the proprietor will put her in the floor show. Al meets Marilyn in New York. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT X.

"Slow up, Al, please. We can race another time. I had breakfast on the train. Is it far to Clara's hotel? Let's go straight there. We can talk on the way. Al, you're a dear to meet me. Probably the middle of the night, too, for you."

"Middle of the night, nix. I beat your train into the station by an hour. Sat up all night thinking of bright things to say to you as you stepped off into my arms, and I'll be a monkey's uncle if I didn't muff every one f them the minute you hove in sight."

"You did very well for one unused to public speaking." Al was fun. "Who! You're racing again. I never knew you to walk so fast. In Millville you had all the speed of a turtle."

"That was my role, Big Eyes. Bored city chap. Fed up with it all. Here we are; climb in. Driver ———," he mentioned a hotel facing Central Park— "and don't spare the horses. Comfy, Duchess? We can take our eats in the open up there. Lots of good air and swell coffee."

"Al, don't think I'm ungrateful, but if you don't mind I'd rather go straight to Clara's hotel. You can drop me there, then go for coffee."

"Sorry, lady. No can do. I'm not yet convinced you're real. There's another little matter. I want to give you the latest reports from the scene of conflict, and take it from an old conflicter, H. B., this is a darberino. You see before you a bruised and battered man. Amazons, my dear, Amazons. Only one Amazon, but she's as good as regiments. I've done everything but crack that gal Clara over the head with a bottle, but somehow she fails to appreciate my interest. What ho! Here we are. Your hand, Duchess!"

At a table overlooking the park Al continued his story.

"Did you wire Blondie you were coming?" he asked.

"No. I thought it better to—surprise her," Marilyn said.

"Won't she be pleased! Especially after that magnum she punished last night."

"Magnum? I don't know what you mean—"

"Skip it. You'll learn all too well if you flock around with Blondie. I have a deep-seated conviction, Little One, that your fair sister would rather not entertain visitors from home right now. She's not in the mood. She's taken a notion the old home town is full of plugs and poison ivy. My suggestion is that you stop right here, out of the zone of fire. Her hotel is just around the corner. That way you can drop in on each other for friendly little visits.

"But, Al, I promised mother I'd stay with Clara," Marilyn protested. "Mums was terribly worried. She seems to sense something is wrong. I didn't tell her—just that Clara wanted me to come to New York to be with her for a few days. If Mums finds I've gone to another hotel, she'll be frantic."

"Then we'll see your mother doesn't know—for a few days anyhow. I can fix it at Clara's hotel to take care of your mail or any long distance messages. I know a girl over there—Miss Nevermind."

"Al, will you be serious? I'm terribly worried, really. I'm afraid I haven't much influence with Clara."

"I am serious. Never more serious in my life. When I think of sweet, clean you going to bat for that—what I mean to say is I don't like the setup with you in it. What's more, Uncle Al insists that you don't tag along with Blondie unless he or some other male relative is along to—well, to give the party tone. I doubt she'll invite you, but just in case, the answer is NO. She starts rehearsing in a couple of days—says she—in the new floor show at the Blue Parrot—night club to you. There's a heavy swain, yclept Herman Hess, who's taking her places. He labors under the delusion he's a playboy and spends tons of dough-re-mi proving it. I wouldn't like the color of his hair—if he had any."

"It sounds—hopeless. Knowing Clara as I do—"

"Keep the chin up, Heartbeat. We'll shake Blondie loose from the fleshpots. The chief—Palmer Watson, head of Metropole—has given orders to go the limit. He's set on getting her out of town before she pulls the company down over his head. The first thing we have to do is to make a little reconnaissance trip to Clara's hotel."

Al paid the bill.

"I'm ready," Marilyn said. Her chin was firm.

"Right. Let's go!"

• • • •

A voice thick with sleep answered the telephone when Marilyn asked for Room 369 at Clara's hotel.

"Is this Clara Marsh?" Marilyn said.

"Yes. What do you want?" came peevishly.

"Clara," eagerly, "this is Marilyn."

Marilyn heard a rustling, a confused sound of motion at the other end of the wire.

"Marilyn!" Clara was wide awake now. "You mean my sister Marilyn? Quit trying to be funny. Whoever you are, you have a nerve calling me this hour of the morning."

"But I am your sister Marilyn. Don't you recognize my voice?"

"For the lovva—where are you?"

"Downstairs in the lobby of your hotel. I'm coming right up."

"Well—it is you. What do you mean by following me to New York! You came to spy on me, that's what. I can thank Al Martino for this. He's getting even because I won't do what he wants me to. I'll get even with him. I'll———"

"Clara, please, I don't know what you're talking about. I came to New York on my vacation, to see the Fair——"

"Yes you did," derisively. "You came to spy on me. You let me alone, hear? You stay away from my room!" It was a shout. "You keep out of my hotel. If you bother me again I'll call the manager and have you put out for bothering me. I'm NOT going back to Millville, and that's that. GOOD-bye!"

The receiver clicked sharply.

Marilyn stood for a time holding the mute receiver to her ear. She must have time to compose herself. Her lips were pressed together tightly, her eyes closed to shut back tears, half of hurt, half chagrin.

"What's the news, Puss-in-Boots?" Al asked, gently for him. "Sister isn't overcome with joy at the sound of your voice? She didn't ask you to share her lavish apartment?"

"She was furious." Now Marilyn dared hang up the receiver, and face Al. "She says I'm not to come near her, that I'm here to spy on her."

"The more I hear of Blondie, the better I like strangulation." Al made a gesture of disgust. "Not come near her, huh? Fine! So we'll walk straight up to her room and make a noise like arriving guests."

"No, we can't do that. Clara said she'd call the manager and have me put out if I bothered her again."

"She'll WHAT?"

"She'd do it, too, or try to. When Clara's in a temper she doesn't know what she's doing — she doesn't care. There'd be a scene—it might get into the papers—she being in the public eye, a beauty queen—"

"Beauty queen? If that big blonde's a beauty, I'm Bob Taylor with all the good points of Ty Powers thrown in. So she wants to play rough, does she? Then we'll play her way. Wait right where you are, H. B. I'll check your bag. We're going for a walk around the block."

"Perhaps that would be best," Marilyn felt defeated. "We might think of some way to persuade Clara to listen to reason—"

"I've already thought," Al said, donning his best business manner. "One twist of the brain, and out pops an idea. Bright idea Al, they calls me. We check the bag, and we're off for the fights."

Halfway down the block, Al turned Marilyn in at a flower shop.

"Gardenia, please," he told the clerk. "A very special gardenia for a very special lady. Also a dozen posies, big showy ones, lots of color, lots of oomph—to be delivered."

The clerk was pleased. Nice order.

"We have special roses, sir, very special. The stems they are ver' long, and the scent, the aroma—magnifique. There is the American Beauty, regal, sir, regal. There is also the yellow rose from our own hothouse—"

"Yellow!" Al grabbed the astonished clerk's hand, shook it vigorously. "How did you guess it? Wrap up a couple of dozen yellows in a nice gaudy bundle—lots of silver ribbon and gauze and chi-chi."

"Yes, sir." The clerk was used to odd orders. "Where shall I send them, sir? Would you like a card, to enclose your name?"

"No, I'll send a boy for them from the hotel down the street. How soon can you have them ready?"

"At once, sir. At once."

"I guess that will be soon enough. Get the gardenia. I'll pay you now. Sa-ay, that is a posie!" Al exclaimed as the clerk lifted it, pure ivory and glistening green, from a bed of cotton. Al took the flower, presented it with a new solemnity to Marilyn. "My compliments, Duchess," he said. "If the flower were lovelier, it would be like you."

Marilyn flushed with pleasure. What girl doesn't thrill at being likened to a lovely flower?

In the street again, Al said, "You're wondering about the yellow roses. They're the pass key to Blondie's apartment. She's whacky about having her rooms filled with flowers from what she calls her 'admirers.' It's a hundred to one she won't open the door until she knows who's on the other side. A boy bearing gifts will get the welcome signal.

"We'll step right back to the hotel. I'll get a phone girl there—Miss Nevermind—to pick us a boy who knows his way around. For a healthy tip a bellhop can be awful smart. He'll take the roses to Blondie's room without stopping to send her a letter he's coming. When he steps inside the door to deposit the posies, I'll be stepping on his heels. I may even give him a push to be sure he doesn't stand in my way. Once inside, I'll play doorman. I'll see that the door stays open until you—you're close to the wall alongside the advance guard during the preliminaries—until you go over the top—I mean over the threshold. The boy will take a fast dive out, I'll close the door very fast and very tight and after that—we're in the laps of the gods. Maybe Blondie will be too weak to stand up under a surprise attack. Anyhow, we'll be close enough to the enemy to see the whites of her eyes. How do you like my war plans, Leftenant?"

Marilyn said, staunchly, "I like any plan that will get me to Clara."

"We'll call this one the Yellow Plan," said Al. "If we're thrown back, we'll try a plan of another color."

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES). New beginnings today should progress quickly. Agreements, promises, dealings with professional people, finances, educational matters, can take new turns, and you should feel a renewed interest and vigor in such affairs, without feeling that you are being hampered.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS). The entire day and evening favors new and important undertakings. You may have opportunities to go after your highest ideals today and until 10:42 p. m. Good will and cooperation are more easily obtained.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—Very favorable influences predominate before 3:47 p. m. for general business activities, wholesale and retail, for dealings with professional people, for matters related to education, for social and artistic affairs. After 3:47 p. m. avoid overexertion and be cautious of your diet.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER).—The entire day and evening does not especially favor new or important undertakings, for the influences tend to retard or delay matters or bring disappointments. An excellent day to stick to routine.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO).—This is an excellent day for making steady progress, for organizing and systematizing your affairs. Friendly contacts should be renewed or established. An excellent day to improve social, business and artistic matters.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—The combined influences operating throughout the entire day make this a rather unfavorable day. Important changes are not favored, and more care than usual should be given to diet. Carelessness, vacillation, misunderstandings may be encountered, and it may be better to consider only routine matters.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—New beginnings today are likely to meet with slow progress, and if things you are wanting to start depend on the time element, it may be better to wait for a more favorable day. A good day to stick to routine.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—An excellent day for making progress along business and industrial lines. The hours previous to 2:43 p. m. are especially auspicious for launching new and important affairs, buying and selling.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS) — Aggressiveness along mechanical and industrial lines should bring good results in the forenoon. After 12 o'clock noon and continuing throughout the afternoon and evening favors dealings with influential friends or officials and asking for favors.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—An excellent day to begin new ventures. The day especially favors investigations, writings, publicity, dealings with managers, officials, shipping and community interests.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—If you have been hesitating about affairs that bring you in touch with earnest and serious people, or work of a conservative nature, plan to do it today. An excellent day for practical affairs and laborious tasks.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—The entire day and until 10:12 p. m. is most auspicious for dealings that call for graciousness of manner, and interests that are of a practical nature. The day favors dealings with the opposite sex. Use care around firearms, machinery and liquids.

WGST PROUDLY QUOTES FROM A LETTER JUST RECEIVED

"'Way back before the fateful Fall of France, before the Battle of Flanders, before the full flood of war hysteria and dedication to defense reached America—before all this, the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company began to divert a few brief seconds of its product-selling radio commercials on WGST to a patriotic purpose with a purely unselfish motive. The twenty-nine words of the Pledge to the Flag were repeated at the close of each of the company's daily programs.

"The swift and spontaneous public acclaim accorded this move is a significant indication of our current national awakening. We have been literally flooded with letters from churches, national patriotic societies, other radio stations and—most important of all—from countless true American individuals.

"We are proud of the fact that our company was first to take advantage of a patriotic privilege of broadcasting a simple pledge that, learned in childhood, has suddenly stirred such united loyalty and so magnified the blessings of being an American.

"These are the twenty-nine words that we have used so effectively in helping bring to the consciousness of the American people the real significance of "Old Glory"—the precious heritage that is woven into our Stars and Stripes: I PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO THE FLAG OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND TO THE REPUBLIC FOR WHICH IT STANDS, ONE NATION, INDIVISIBLE, WITH LIBERTY AND JUSTICE FOR ALL."

This pledge is heard daily over WGST on

"LINDA'S FIRST LOVE"

Six Bandits Steal 'Valueless' Mail

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—(AP)—A half-dozen bandits, performing in the best wild west tradition, held up a New York Central mail car in uptown Manhattan early today and made a clean getaway.

Executing the robbery at the 225th street Marble Hill station, with clocklike precision, the gun-flourishing bad men made only one error—they robbed the right train, but on the wrong day, and got nothing but a sack of "valueless" letters, police authorities said.

Briton Must Pay $88; Said 'Docks Blown Up'

BIRKENHEAD, England, Aug. 23.—(AP)—For saying "the docks at Dover have been blown to hell," John Cook, a bus inspector, was fined the equivalent of $8 today and ordered to pay $80 court costs.

'Gossip Tactics' Laid to Foes By Hartsfield

'Ticket Fixers and Politicians' Seek To Defeat Him, Mayor Charges.

Addressing a crowd of several hundred people at Faith's Crossing on Stovall street in the second ward, in the same ward where his opponent was speaking, Mayor Hartsfield exhibited his motion picture, "Four Years of Progress," and made a vigorous defense of the policies of his administration.

"The ticket fixers and politicians who have lost their privilege of fixing cases are the ones trying to break up our lifesaving program," the mayor said.

"The opposition offers you nothing but a program of criticism. The same old crowd whom people repudiated in the last campaign are out again, using the same old tactics of gossip and rumors. The people are not going to stand for a return of the old conditions of near bankruptcy, police demoralization and mounting traffic deaths. The opposition candidate was a last desperate choice of this crowd and he has been overwhelmingly defeated for every office he has offered for."

"They just can't answer a record of a city on a cash basis, with improved services and a fine traffic record."

The mayor carries his campaign back into the second ward Monday night with a meeting at John B. Gordon school, and on Tuesday at Bass Junior High and Thursday at the Lula Kingsberry school.

Rivers Appeals For RFC Help To Build Dam

Savannah River Project Discussed at Parley in Washington.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—After a conference today with RFC officials, Governor Rivers of Georgia expressed hope of having the government finance development of the $28,000,000 multiple power and flood control project at the Clarks Hill site on the Savannah river near Augusta.

Accompanied by State Senator Edgar Brown of South Carolina, Governor Rivers conferred with officials of the federal lending agency over a proposal for the government providing funds for a joint bonding issue between the states of Georgia and South Carolina for development of the Clarks Hill project.

The plans call for joint control and operation of the project by the two states, rather than as a government enterprise, with the government loan suggested for financing the $28,000,000 bond issue repaid out of proceeds from the sale of power over a period of 30 years. Title to the power development would revert to the two states after the loan had been liquidated.

'Mayor Wants To Be Dictator,' Lyle Charges

City Councilman, Seeking Re-election, Indorses LeCraw Candidacy.

The first open break between Mayor Hartsfield and a member of the city council seeking re-election occurred last night when Second Ward Councilman George Lyle, speaking at the Murphy Junior High school, indorsed Roy LeCraw for mayor and charged Mayor Hartsfield "wants to be dictator of Atlanta."

Lyle chided the mayor for taking credit for all of the improvements made in the city during the last four years and charged him with efforts to purge him because he had not let the mayor dictate his vote in the city council.

LeCraw, the principal speaker, charged Hartsfield with being opposed to the proposed bond issue which will be voted on the same day as the primary.

"Something is wrong with a government that will permit these fire traps—portables—to exist," he said.

LeCraw also said the mayor had dictatorial designs. "He's got the elements of a dictator, if he just had the ability to be one," he said.

In charging Mayor Hartsfield was opposed to the bond issue, LeCraw said: "If your bond don't pass you can go over there and blame that man in the city hall—Bill Hartsfield."

Other speakers included Second Ward Council Candidates Dr. Frank H. Newman, Joe Allen, M. R. Snipes and Gregory Griggs, candidate for alderman from the second ward; George A. Cole, candidate for tax collector, and Dan Bridges, first ward alderman candidate.
